John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is going to dedicate in Pekin new buildings for the Union Medical College, established by the Rockefellers in China. That is the best missionary that one country can send for another.

Modern science can cleanse the leper, wipe out the plague where it starts and wipe out a worse plague, ignorance, and in places where that starts.

Some minds are not open to new religious teaching. Some even think their own religion quite satisfactory and resent efforts of well meaning strangers to convert their children and prove their local gods disreputable.

But all welcome the missionary work that the Rockefellers do, sending kerosene to light their houses, and using the profits on scientific institutions to light the brain. It should be an instructive trip for young Mr. Rockefeller. He is now offered one thousand dollars for an article of one thousand words on these topics:

"What are the great differences between America and China? And why it would be fatal for this country to permit unlimited Asiatic immigration."

"Same laws and rules for both sexes," say the thoughtful ones. But they don't get same laws and rules. The world has just read of the young Canadian trained nurse that killed herself.

First she had made a fool of herself, poor girl, with the help of some doctor. The doctor's wife knew of it, went to the nurse and begged her "leave my husband alone."

The young nurse promised that she would do it, and did, killing herself with poison. "I cannot give that man up, but I can give myself and life up," she said to the wife.

"I have taken the poison. You need not worry any more about your husband."

The wife took her to a hospital. Now the nurse is buried, the wife is back with her husband. And, most delicious of all, the police say, "we are not giving out names, on account of the doctor in the case. It might hurt his practice."

In the old days, of the cave and the mammoth, the wife, mistress of the cave, would have hit the other lady on the head with a club. You observe improvement there. Wives don't kill the man, because cave instincts are still with them. They had to keep the man alive to keep bears from eating the children, so they plead and fought with each other.

"Harding plans a super-race of Americans," says the newspaper heading. The President is too wise to plan that. But he is planning to improve this race that needs improvement in several directions. The President wisely has enlisted the services of Brigadier General Sawyer, trained scientist, thinker and doctor, one whose studies have not closed his mind to the possibilities of improvement.

Observing that one-third of the men called to the draft were defective physically, General Sawyer will try to remedy that, beginning with mothers and their babies, which is the right beginning. The idea is to help mothers before and during child birth, saving many of the 25,000 mothers that die during child birth every year and scores of thousands of children that die every year unnecessarily.

That will be a good beginning. The "super-race" can come after. You won't see it for another 100,000 years.

A young English girl named Snell beat all at the University of Cambridge in the law examinations. She stands "at the head of the law tripos."

Young women do their best work as mothers, and the more intelligent they are the more important it is that they should have as many children as possible.

To create several intelligent brains is more important than developing your one good brain.

But for young women that will not be content with the only great female profession, the study of law and astronomy is recommended. In both they can excel. With the temperamental, to use the foolish word, that don't like fireside or books, music and acting should take the place of law and astronomy. All women should keep out of politics, but unfortunately, necessity drives them to it, and men want them because they are more honest than men.

A learned judge, shocked by juvenile crime, urges the revival of the "cat-o'-nine-tails." You can easily enough beat criminality, hatred and ignorance into children, but you can't beat crime out of them. If the Judge will investigate his young criminals he will find that a great majority of them were thoroughly beaten, and that, partly, explains their criminality.

War, which is savagery, brings back savage conditions. When two tribes of Indians had finished fighting, killing and scalping each other, they took up barter again. One closely watching his scheming neighbor, would hold out a beaver skin or whatever he wanted to trade for the thing he wanted to get.

European nations having stopped scalping each other, Germany now offers in barter, for credit, the

GEN. CHARLES H. TAYLOR DEAD

CITY LOSES VETERAN LEADER

General Charles H. Taylor Passes Away After Several Days' Illness

DIED TODAY

General Charles H. Taylor, Editor of the Boston Globe, who passed away today in his 75th year.

General Charles H. Taylor, for the past forty-eight years editor of the Boston Globe, died this forenoon at his home, No. 224 Commonwealth avenue, in his seventy-fifth year.

It was a week ago Monday evening, while taking his customary walk along Commonwealth avenue with one of his sons, that Gen. Taylor suffered a slight shock, which came as the first warning of his approaching end. Although confined to bed, he insisted the next day, and even through last Friday, upon directing details of articles which he wished to have appear in the Globe.

But, except for successive rallies he gradually weakened. His children and grandchildren went to his bed, and there, at 10 this morning, he died peacefully.

Thus ended the career of the editor oldest in active service among American newspapermen and one of the most fruitful lives in all journalism.

The life of Charles H. Taylor, proprietor, publisher and editor-in-chief of the Boston Globe, is a story of a young man's battles and of a young man's victories. Becoming a cub reporter at fifteen, a soldier at sixteen, a

Miss Peabody Says Dr. Barrell Claimed He Came From Race of Great Lovers

An affidavit to the effect that Dr. Charles Sewall Barrell of No. 425 Beacon street made love to Miss Grace Allen Peabody of Park avenue, New York, under pretense of studying geology, was presented in Suffolk divorce court before Judge Flynn today.

Miss Peabody further quoted Dr. Barrell, who is 35 years old, as saying he came from a great race of lovers, and that the Empress Eugenie of France was a member of the family.

The affidavit featured a hearing on an appeal from a Probate Court decision regarding the custody of the two Barrell children, Charles Sewall, Jr., 12 years old, and Julia Elizabeth, 10 years of age.

LARCENY OF $3,000 CHARGED

Charles K. Hogan, Named by Convicted Bank Cashier of Brighton, Surrenders

Charles K. Hogan, a former Wall street broker, surrendered to the Boston police today to answer an indictment alleging larceny of $3,000 from the Market Trust Company of Brighton and accessory before the fact to the larceny of $22,575 from the same institution.

His arrest follows an alleged confession of Luther R. Hanson, former cashier of the bank, who is in State's prison serving from nine to ten years for stealing $17,000 of the bank's funds.

Hanson declares that he gave $128,000 of his defalcations to Hogan to invest in stocks and bonds.

Hogan was previously indicted on five counts for larceny of $22,451 from the same bank. He pleaded not guilty to the charge and the case is still

LAUNCHES ATTACK ON HURLBURT

Tufts Replies to Charge by Allen that Indictment of Bigelow Was Hidden

Coupled with the introduction today of Miss Grace L. Farley as the latest girl of mystery in the growing list of women in the Middlesex County scandal, was the first counter-charge made by District Attorney Nathan A. Tufts against Special Assistant Attorney-General Henry F. Hurlburt, who filled the dual role of lawyer and private detective in the Tufts inquiry and who is to be the chief prosecutor at the trial of Tufts.

Tufts' veiled blow at Hurlburt today was one of the biggest developments in the controversy, which has been crowded with sensations, and is the first index of the line of defense to be offered by the ousted prosecutor from Middlesex County, who is accused of grave charges by Attorney-General J. Weston Allen.

Tufts accuses Special Attorney-General Hurlburt of having tried to force him to press a secret indictment against William DeFord Bigelow, young millionaire of Boston, in order to have the indictment "serve as a lever" in a $50,000 case when Daniel

It required the services of four police officers to arrest John F. Doyle, twenty-two-year-old "shoofter" of Ellet street, Dorchester, following a battle between Doyle and Patrolman John J. Gorham of Station 11.

During the fray Gorham lost helmet, badge and club, while a large crowd of supporters urged Doyle on. The officer interfered when he saw Doyle beating John Harrington, fourteen years old.

LIQUOR IS FOUND IN NIGHTSHIRT

"My, what a tremendous night shirt," said police, upon finding the voluminous folds of a young tent enveloping the person of Jacob Slafkowich, No. 126 Linden street, East Boston. They were in the house seeking liquor. To confiscate, we muse. The one officer of inquiring mind felt the folds of the robe. The liquor was there, they stated in East Boston court today. AIM 'POISON GAS' AT LEWIS

Sensational Charges Made by Gompers Men to Discredit Miners' Head

By International News Service.

Denver, Col., June 22.—Sensational charges which may be aired on the floor of the convention of the American Federation of Labor and have an aftermath resulting in a rupture in labor's ranks, have been injected into the fight between Samuel Gompers and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, for the presidency of the federation.

Supporters of Lewis charged today that a "campaign of poisonous gas" is being conducted by the Gompers camp to discredit the miners' head.

At a secret conference of the delegates of the railroad unions last night, lasting until early today, John H. Walker, president of the Illinois Federation of Labor, presented a series of charges against Lewis.

They were of so serious a nature that Lewis and William Green, secretary of the miners' union and a member of the executive council of the federation, were summoned to the meeting. Lewis answered Walker's charges one by one.

After a speech by Green, heretofore affiliated with the Gompers element, the conference unanimously gave Lewis a vote of confidence.

Railroad union delegates charged in the meeting that Gompers was attempting to split the railroad unions.

Lewis denounced Walker. "He made these charges in secret and without my presence. He dare not dare to face me and make them," said Lewis.

"I want it made plain here and now that I have never sought Gompers' place. I became a candidate only after I had been importuned by many delegates who declared sentiment demanded a change in the administration. I never wanted now that I shall not permit this campaign of poisonous gas organized to discredit me to go on. I fight in the open and I shall fight clean. It's dirty politics and a disgrace to the labor movement of America."

million kilograms, about two and a half million pounds of silver.

The real wealth of Germany is human labor, intelligence, fertile soil, scientific knowledge. But in savagery those things don't count. It is necessary to hold out two million pounds of silver as "a basis of credit" to start business again.

FAMINE FOLLOWS WATER ROW

Dispute Over Bill Leaves Five West Watertown Families Without Supply

Five families in the Edgefield section of West Watertown have been cut off from the town's water supply as a result of a peculiar neighborhood row. They are forced to carry water several hundred yards.

The water famine follows a difference of opinion of three families with Mrs. Frank M. Travers. Those in revolt are the families of P. H. O'Connell and Patrick Merrillo on Westminster avenue and the family of William A. Lockhart on Edgefield avenue.

The streets on which the water-famined residents live are not accepted by the town. The families get their water supply through privately owned pipes.

These pipes join the town-owned pipes at Mrs. Travers' home and the water is metered there. Heretofore the bill for the water has been distributed by the several families.

The remonstrants say that Mrs. Travers did not apportion the bill equitably this year and so refused to pay. Mrs. Travers in turn refused to pay the town the whole amount, $44.50, and the water was shut off.

BIG HUNT ON IN UNION SQUARE

Policemen Seek Somebody for Unknown Crime and Find Milkman

All was quiet in Union square, Somerville, where Reserve Officer John Y. O'Leary stood patiently listening for the breaking of day. Not even the cheerful voice of a caroling milkman could be heard.

The policeman yawned prodigiously and then nearly fractured his jaw as he snapped to attention, his eye caught by a movie figure in front of the Masonic Building across the street.

Drawing his trusty nightstick the officer began a strategic advance, but before he reached his objective the man disappeared through the door of the building.

O'Leary found the door locked. While examining it he noticed the all-night light in the adjoining drug store of Edward Edwards, No. 23 Union square, go out.

Evidently desperate characters were abroad.

O'Leary hurried to a call box, where he turned in an alarm. A short time later Patrolmen John Jones, Warner and Hurley arrived, and the building was surrounded.

It was then discovered that the rear door of William Rinn's restaurant, No. 30 Union square, was open, and tables and chairs were overturned on the floor. But no lurking intruder was found.

The policemen then aroused Edwards, proprietor of the drug store. They entered in skirmish line, but again found no one.

While they were perplexedly gazing at each other a crash was heard in the restaurant. With guns drawn the officers rushed in and covered a man who stood at the icebox.

He turned out to be John Payne, driver for D. Whiting & Sons, who was engaged in putting in the day's supply of milk.

The policemen then retired in disgust.

COURT DENIES GREELEY 'FOND' MRS. JOY'S PLEA OF KISSING

Refuses to Set Aside Divorce Granted Fire Department Captain

Housekeeper Admits Banker Caressed Her at Least Twice Daily

An attempt to have set aside the decree nisi awarded Captain Mellen H. Joy of Engine Company 32, Boston fire department, was made today when Mrs. Emma M. Joy of No. 39 Vine street Roxbury appeared in the divorce court with alleged new evidence.

This alleged evidence consisted of her diary, said to have been found after the original trial, and the testimony of two women, produced to refute charges made by Captain Joy during the divorce trial.

After listening to the testimony of the two women, and a impressioned plea by Attorney Doyle, representing Mrs. Joy, Judge Flynn said there was not sufficient evidence produced to cause him to rescind the former decision.

Attorney Doyle offered the diary, which showed the entries under dates of June 2, 1917 and labor Day, the same year. These dates were specified by Captain Joy in his allegations of unfaithfulness.

The first entry, as read to the court, follows: "June 2, 1917, went to whist party with Gertrude, and Lilla was with me all night."

The second read: "Labor Day, 1917 Ill all day and not out of the house."

Attorney Doyle read a stenographic of the testimony in the divorce case, in which Mrs. Joy was accused of having been accompanied to her home by a man on the date of June 2. At that time Captain Joy called at the his sister trailed the couple to Vine street, and similar testimony was given by a private detective.

Washington, June 22.—Cancellation of all the advertising contracts of the United States Shipping Board was ordered here today by Joseph D. Lasker, the new chairman. The extensive advertising campaign of the board has been carried on through agencies and newspapers all over the United States and involves approximately $250,000 in contracts.

COURT DENIES GREELEY 'FOND' OF KISSING

Housekeeper Admits Banker Caressed Her at Least Twice Daily

Cyrus Greeley, the 73-year-old Lewiston, Me., banker, had an affectionate disposition and was fond of kissing.

This "peculiarity" was bared in a deposition read today at the trial of the $100,000 suit brought by Mrs. Jane Frost Rogers against Frederick Greeley, a cousin of the banker.

The witness was Mrs. Sarah Benson, who acted a Greeley's housekeeper in Lewiston for a month in 1915.

Mrs. Benson admitted under cross-examination that Cyrus kissed her night and morning and frequently in between times. She also declared that he had repeatedly tried to keep her employer away from Mrs. Rogers, and that once, seeing them on the street, she tried to drag Cyrus away from the woman.

Her daughter, Miss Susan Benson, was another witness. She was with her mother while the latter was acting as housekeeper for Greeley, and she admitted that she had "petted" Nora Greeley as soon "as she heard of the engagement between Mr. Greeley and Mrs. Rogers."

Deposition from Frank A. Murray, attorney for Mrs. Rogers in her divorce suit against Cyrus Greeley and Charles A. Litchfield, treasurer of the Androscoggin County Savings Bank, of which Cyrus Greeley was president, were read.

The attorney testified that Mrs. Rogers was paid $7,500 on May 3, 1916, in full of her claim for damages due to the breaking of the engagement. Litchfield said that "the marriage of Mr. Greeley would have been a serious blow to the bank had it ever taken place."

Mrs. Rogers alleges that Frederick Greeley prevented her marriage with Cyrus Greeley, thus causing her to lose a share in the Greeley estate.

Denies Selling Drugs

Frank Bruno, of Temple street, Dorchester, was charged in United States court today with selling cocaine and morphine. He pleaded not guilty and was held in $1,500 for hearing June 29.

MISSING SHIP PUZZLE GROWS

Twelve American Vessels Believed to Now Be in Hands of "Pirates"

Offshore pirates have stolen or scuttled twelve missing ships, long overdue in American ports.

This theory is generally held today in such responsible quarters as the State and Department of Commerce offices in Washington.

There is absolutely no doubt, it is asserted, that the missing steamship Carol Deering, one of the latest to disappear, was wrecked and looted on Diamond Shoals, recently by pirates.

The two government departments have a long list of ships which failed to reach port since January 1.

Last word from all these vanished ships was received in American waters.

There is little doubt, according to official Washington, that whatever unknown peril is lurking on the high seas is located off the North Atlantic coast.

WOULD USE WIRELESS.

These raiders, it is believed, operate in a fast submarine or tanker—a "long, low, rakish craft" like the piratical craft of fiction. Such a pirate crew would use torpedoes and shell fire only as a last resort, instead of the cutlasses of Captain Kidd's days.

They would be provided with wireless and would be adept at quickly discerning the whereabouts of their prey.

The only other theory advanced is that Bolsheviists are instituting a campaign of terror. This theory, however, is given much less consideration than the one concerning

LIST IS GROWING.

The list of ships which have disappearing at sea is growing. It started with three, which were believed to have been looted by a crew hired by their crews and taken into Russian ports.

Seven more were added to the list by New York marine agencies, and still later Washington added still two more, bringing the total today up to twelve.

It is held possible in Washington that when the authorities get upon the trail of some of the missing vessels, ex-officials say, a few of the U. S. Navy collier Cyclops may be solved.

A theory that the Bolsheviki may be responsible for the disappearance of the vessels is strongly insisted upon by many. It is pointed out that the mines thickly planted around the British Isles were of the permanent type, and are said to be capable of floating for four years and still be effective for the purpose.

GIRL STARTS INVESTIGATION.

The plea of Miss Lucy Wormwell, pretty twenty-four-year-old daughter of Mrs. Mary Wormwell, cashier of the Deering, to senator Hale, of Maine, and then to the general agent department started the official investigation.

The State Department made public information in its files concerning the disappearance of the crew of the Deering. The official declared that "there is every suspicion of foul play in the mystery."

The department, for the first time, gave the exact text of the message which was picked up by a boat off near Cape Hatteras. The lanuderlt message, which was sent by the first mate of the Deering. The message read:

"Deering captured by oil-burning boat something like chaser, taking off everything, including crew. Crew hidden and over all the decks to make escape. Finder please notify headquarters Deering."

CLEAR STREETS AS SIMS LANDS

1,000 N. Y. Policemen Exercise Precautions Against Demonstrations

New York, June 22.—Rear Admiral William S. Sims, U. S. N., who was sent to England by Secretary of the Navy Denby because of a controversy with Admiral Benson, received today on the White Star liner Olympic.

Extraordinary police precautions were made to protect the admiral from hostile demonstrations on the part of Irish sympathizers.

West street, the street flanking North river where the White Star liner has its quay, was cleared of all persons not up Ninth street and Eighth avenue. More than 1,000 police were on duty as well as many detectives. Two platoons of mounted police slowly patrolled back and forth before the pier and kept the side streets clear. Other policemen on motor cycles scurried back and forth. No one except persons holding special passes or passes was allowed to approach the dock.

The only statement Admiral Sims made here before he sailed was to the effect that he had no fear of having his distinguished naval career abruptly ended, as a result of his controversy with Admiral Benson, because he recall by Secretary of the Navy Denby.

After seeing the Secretary of the Navy he said just before his train left for Newport, where he will go to resume my duties as president of the War College.

"I have no fear of the recall. He were a green hat, a gray suit, and carries dashed the and a low cold cut. The Secretary has been most kind to me," he said. "Whatever he may do in the future, I shall always feel grateful to him for the way he has treated me."

The last complications of Bigelow, which began with the Lucy Wormwell case, resulted from his alleged friendship with Miss Farley. The Bigelow affair was brought to a sensational climax at the trial of Tufts before the full Suffolk grand jury. The jury, it was learned today, on good authority, would start hearing the first week in July and continue for a month.

Attorney-General Allen's specification that Bigelow was "intimate" with Miss Farley or Dr. Forrest Bigelow, but as a matter of fact, his name is William Bigelow, and he is at present on the docket in Suffolk Superior Court.

In replying to District Attorney Tufts' request for further details concerning paragraph No. 19, in the indictment, that alleged that Attorney-General Allen in his bill of specifications against Bigelow, he said:

"As to paragraph 19, your informant alleges, in addition to the indictments specified under paragraph 18, that in 1915 one, William DePoe Bigelow, or one William Dwight Bigelow, was indicted, William J. Corcoran being then district attorney, and that since that time said indictment has been kept secret and hidden, and that the defendant has not been called into the court to plead to the same or reconsider, all with the knowledge of this respondent."

The said referred to by District Attorney Allen was indicted in October, 1915, by Attorney Daniel H. Coakley, in Suffolk Superior Court, as an accessory after the fact of murder in the killing of Dr. Fred Bigelow and sought $10,000, as reimbursement on a note which Bigelow had given to Coakley and had failed to meet.

CASE SENSATIONAL.

The papers in this case had been impounded by the court, Attorney Coakley said for interrogatories and the answers filed by Bigelow are reported to be of a sensational character. Coakley is reported to have promised Bigelow not only to defend his right against the claims of Grace L. Farley in her suit for alleged breach of promise to marry, but also to have prevented publicity.

This appears to have been successfully accomplished until Attorney-General Allen pinched his artillery against Tufts.

The docket of the clerk's office at Pemberton square shows that the law firm of Hurlburt, Jones & Hall, of which Special Attorney-General Henry F. Hurlburt is the leading member, is the chief counsel of record for Attorney Coakley.

The firm of Hutchins & Wheeler and Attorney-at-Law James P. Colter are listed counsel for Bigelow. Major Bigelow's service overseas delayed the Coakley suit, which is still pending. Various pleadings have been filed.

The last of the entry was as recent as May 25 of this year, when the court removed an attachment of $20,000 on the estate of Bigelow's wife, Mrs. Helen H. Bigelow, at Cohasset. The court found that the attachment had been erroneously made.

Investigation of the "girl" Thomas Monette alleged by Tufts in his motion of the Supreme Court, at the Tufts inquiry, will result in a sensational disclosure, it was announced in official circles today.

MAY RIVAL REVELS.

Monette, who advertised himself as a dance, medium and clairvoyant and who is known to the police of all the large cities, is alleged to have been "shaken down" for large sums by certain lawyers, following his arrest on the charge of stealing $11,000 from Mrs. Justine Gordon of No. 14 Vesta road, Dorchester.

The Monette case promises to be almost as prominent as that of the Mishawum Manor revelations and the alleged plot for extorting $7,000 from the officers of the International Service Company, Inc., a real estate concern. It involves friction and scandal in the Cambridge Police Department and will make interesting reading when told in full.

MYSTERY GIRL IN TUFTS CASE

Grace Farley's Suit Against Bigelow Brought to Light by Allen Charges

H. Coakley, one of the attorneys accused by Allen, had brought against Bigelow.

TUFTS' ATTACK

In that case Hurlburt acted as counsel for Coakley, whom he and Allen now charge to be the centre of the $100,000 Mishawum Manor conspiracy.

In his statement issued today, after alluding to Attorney-General Allen's as "a brutal and unfair attack," District Attorney Tufts said:

"In paragraph 8, in the latest emanation from Special Attorney-General Hurlburt, he brings up the Bigelow case. In the public records of Superior Court (Suffolk County) will be found a case where Daniel H. Coakley brought suit against Bigelow to collect on a note claimed to have been given for attorney's fees, rendered by Mr. Coakley to Mr. Bigelow.

"It is that case Mr. Coakley's attorney of record is the present Special Assistant Attorney-General, Henry F. Hurlburt. Let some of the reporters ask Mr. Hurlburt if he wanted me to bring a criminal indictment against Mr. Bigelow, voted by a packed jury long before I become district attorney, as a tool to collect Coakley's note against Bigelow.

"Perhaps it is not wise for me ever to speak of it, but I have been a mule to being bullied and battered about, but the reputation acquired and held up to public contempt and ridicule, can you blame him if the limit of human endurance has been reached?"

ENTER GRACE FARLEY

The name of Grace L. Farley was revealed for the first time in Attorney-General Allen's bill of specifications against District Attorney Tufts, in connection with the case of William De Poe Bigelow, a World War veteran, who was shot to death by Albert H. "Pepper King," of Boston and Cohasset.

Attorney-General Allen's specifications charged that District Attorney Tufts failed to produce indictment against young Bigelow, who served overseas as a major in the United States army, and that the indictment alluded to by Allen was reported in police and court circles to have been kept secret and signed growing out of Bigelow's alleged relations with a young woman. Bigelow is married.

The legal complications of Bigelow, which began with the Lucy Wormwell case, resulted from his alleged friendship with Miss Farley. The Bigelow affair was brought to a sensational climax at the trial of Tufts before the full Suffolk grand jury. The jury, it was learned today, on good authority, would start hearing the first week in July and continue for a month.

Attorney-General Allen's specification that Bigelow was "intimate" with Miss Farley or Dr. Forrest Bigelow, but as a matter of fact, his name is William Bigelow, and he is at present on the docket in Suffolk Superior Court.

In replying to District Attorney Tufts' request for further details concerning paragraph No. 19, in the indictment, that alleged that Attorney-General Allen in his bill of specifications against Bigelow, he said:

"As to paragraph 19, your informant alleges, in addition to the indictments specified under paragraph 18, that in 1915 one, William DePoe Bigelow, or one William Dwight Bigelow, was indicted, William J. MRS. ORTHWEIN SHOWS SCARS WHERE ZIEGLER HIT HER LIPS

CALLS MAN SHE KILLED A BRUTE

Ziegler Threw Heer Through Glass Door of Auto, She Tells Jury

By Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 22.—Mrs. Cora Isabella Orthwein told the jury that the man she loved and killed was a brute.

She went on the witness stand to defend herself of the charge of slaying Herbert R. Ziegler, district manager of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company.

Although she did not get to the details of the shooting in her narrative when court adjourned for the day, the crowd sat breathless as she smashed her clenched fists one into the other to illustrate how Ziegler had beaten her.

Part of the time she sobbed as she told her story of deception and brutality.

SHOWS SCARS ON LIPS.

At another time she passed up and down in front of the jury to show the two white scars on both lips. She said they had been inflicted by Ziegler's fist while he was in a drunken rage.

She told how he beat her once and threw her crashing through the glass window of a limousine.

She related the shock she received when she learned he was a married man and not free to keep the promise he had made to wed her.

Their illicit love affair, she said, lasted for five years before it was ended by a bullet in her luxurious apartment during the early part of March 1, last. During that time she saw him every day.

"We are talking about a woman who lived in the building and he said he didn't want me to visit her any more. I said he had no right to pick my friends. He struck me. I went into the bedroom and locked the door. He followed and broke down the door. The telephone was in the bedroom and I was trying to call my sister. He pulled the telephone off the wall. Then, he struck me again and again.

THROWN FROM CAR.

"Later he began to cry and said he was sorry. I told him I was through with him and ordered him out of the house. He pleaded and begged me to allow him his way so we talked the matter over and made up.

She related how he had thrown her out of an automobile on another occasion, where she said:

"I never saw him like that before," she said. "He told me to shut up and hit me in the face. I cried for help, but he struck me repeatedly.

"Then I cried, 'For God's sake let me out.' He shoved me out of the car. It was running. The glass door was broken. I ran back in the road. I stood there waiting for a taxi. A car came and a man and woman got out to help me. I was just climbing in the car when Ziegler came up. He pulled me out. He tore my mink coat to shreds. There was another man in the car. Ziegler hit him in the face and knocked him down.

LENT GOODYEAR STOCK.

"He put me back in his car and kept hitting me all the way to town. He grabbed my lips between his fingers and squeezed them until they bled. He ripped me terribly."

She testified that she had invested $10,000 in Goodyear stock, but that Ziegler borrowed the stock to put up as collateral and she never saw it again.

"But that was all right," she added, "for I loved him and everything I had was his."

Frances White Scorns to Answer 'Lies of World'

Frances White, named by wife of New York composer, in $100,000 alienation suit.

New York, June 22.—Demure of eye and sweet of smile tiny Frances White greeted a reporter with baby-like poise in her apartment at No. 57 West Sixty-eighth street.

Then she adjusted herself in the corner of an enormous upholstered chair, her small suave clothed limbs with black low heeled patent leather sandals resting little beyond its edge. And then:

"Can't a girl of the stage receive the attention and admiration from her manager and conductors shown all actors who star?

Can't a wholesome appreciation and friendship exist among theatrical business associate s without gossips getting their tongues going about the wonderful cnoice scandal? And surely I'm not responsible for people's admiring me? It is not my fault. And I feel deeply sorry and hurt to be involved in such perfectly nasty scandal as an alienation suit."

Mrs. Dorothy Stoddard has begun a $100,000 suit against Frances White, who starred in the recent Hammerstein production, "Jimmy," for alleged alienation of her husband, Herbert Stardard's affections.

Stoddard composed the music for "Jimmy" and conducted the performances.

As Miss White went on speaking all babyness vanished and she spoke with a determined woman.

"But this nor anything else can take the starch out of me. I'll never be licked. I love to work and develop, and failure doesn't discourage me. Neither do mistakes. This is a big knock. But a lie never hurt anyone. That's a good thing to know.

"There is absolutely no truth in any of the things said about me and Mr. Stoddard. He was a great friend of mine in business, as is generally the case between a star, whether he is a man or woman, and managers and conductors. The main reason for the friendship is that every when is generally granted a star. For managers' yearly incomes hang on the star in the last analysis."

SLAYS MAN WHO 'WRONGED' HER

Chicago Girl Exacts Grim Toll From Her Alleged Betrayer

By International News Service

Chicago, June 22.—With the cry "You wronged me," Lucy Rosatti, fifteen years old, today waylaid Guy De Peso, forty-eight years old, a block from his home in Chicago Heights and shot him twice. De Peso, the father of several children, died later in a hospital.

The wisp of a girl, according to the story she told police, stepped from a doorway directly into the path of her victim. Her cheeks were deathly pale and her eyes blazed with fury.

"You wronged me," she said, "and yesterday you lied to the judge. Pray to God, Guiseppe, for now you die."

Terror obsessed the man and he screamed a desperate appeal to the girl to spare his life. Instead she fired twice. As the man fell on the sidewalk she walked to her home a few doors away.

Yesterday the girl appeared before a Chicago judge and complained that De Peso had taken liberties with her against her will. Brought into court, De Peso denied this and was released on $2,000 bail.

NEW HIGH PRESSURE UNIT IS INSTALLED

As the result of tests made at the wharves near Summer street, when it was shown that effective streams of salt water can be thrown upon a fire within 1,000 feet of the waterfront, a new portable high-pressure fire-fighting system will be added to the Boston Fire Department, within a short time. The new combination wagon in East Boston, according to the plans, will be used as an auxiliary to the fire boats and will be on hand to lay hose from the water-front to the scene of the fire.

INSTALL ANGELL AT YALE'S HELM

Thousands Pack Memorial Hall at Impressive Commencement Ceremonies

By International News Service.

New Haven, Ct., June 22.—With simple but impressive ceremonies and amid the plaudits of three thousand persons who packed Memorial Hall, Yale today combined her annual commencement with the inauguration of James Howland Angell as her fourteenth president, thus enabling President Arthur Twining Hadley, retiring after twenty-two years' service, to confer upon the new president the Honorary degree of doctor of laws.

Two women, one of them Madame Curie, discoverer of radium, the other Miss Julia Lathrop, chief of the Federal Children's Bureau, were among fifteen recipients of honorary degrees. Both received an ovation.

Following the usual procession of recipients of honorary degrees and delegates of colleges, universities and other institutions here for the inauguration of President Angell the exercises were opened with an Inaugural march composed by Dean Smith of the Yale Music School.

In introducing Madame Curie, Professor William Lyon Phelps said in part:

"It is superfluous to mention Mme. Curie's discoveries in science now that she has discovered America. She has often encountered danger in scientific experiments, but nothing so dangerous as American hospitality."

COOL THIEF ROBS HOSPITAL OF $25

Worcester, June 22.—Cooly asking why there were no lights on the second floor of the Kendall Cottage home for nurses at Memorial Hospital, a man stole $25 from a bureau drawer and left before a nurse, Miss Linda Chadwick, could give the alarm.

ADMIT ANOTHER NOTE OF GUIDE

Mrs. Stillman Fights to Have "Rolled Oats and Bacon" Letter Ruled Out

New York, June 22.—James A. Stillman, former president of the National City Bank, has succeeded in getting another of the so-called Beauvais letters into evidence in his divorce action against his wife.

This was revealed at a conference between Mrs. Stillman's lawyers in Yonkers, where ways and means to have the letter stricken out were discussed. The letter just admitted by Referee Gleason is marked "Exhibit C," and is one of the seven that were originally presented by Stillman's attorneys and marked for identification, but not then admitted.

The letter which, therefore, has now been admitted, is known colloquially as the "Rolled Oats and Bacon" missive, to distinguish it from the "Dearest Honey" communication.

Both exhibits "B" and "C" were admitted on their identification by former servants of the Stillman estate. Regarding the "Dearest Honey" letter, there was sharp contradiction of testimony.

Bernard Kelly, former superintendent, swore that Mary Kelly, a former maid, had showed it to him, but Kelly denied this, but said she had showed him the exhibit of the "Rolled Oats and Bacon" missive.

Mrs. Stillman's lawyers will ask that "B" be ruled out because the cause of conflicting identification and that "C" be tossed aside because Miss Kelly testified that all letters were thrown loosely about the lodge, indicating that Mrs. Stillman attached no value to them and did not attempt to secret their contents.

A motion to strike out both exhibits has already been made on behalf of Mrs. Stillman and Referee Gleason is considering it. He will decide on it next Tuesday when the hearings are to be resumed, simultaneously with his decision on the motion to strike out all the testimony of Fr. Hugh L. Russell, the Buffalo osteopath.

Love Greater Than Fame, Asserts Mary Garden's

The thirteenth installment of Mary Garden's picture of her own life, as sketched by the famous opera singer herself for the readers of the Hearst newspapers, is given below.

By MARY DOUGHERTY.

"Is success sufficient for a woman? I think it is—but only when the successes in question includes spiritual satisfaction.

"When the success constitutes only a material achievement then I imagine it is not.

"Speaking for myself, success has been sufficient because my soul was in my work. I lived always for music—it was my very life—my heart. And so when I dedicated my life to it and it yielded me the power to move other human hearts—that was success to me, and it was sufficient.

"If it had yielded a mere money return then I think it would not have been.

"I don't mind adding, however, that while I am gloriously happy in my music and the return that it has brought me, IF LOVE CAME TO ME TOMORROW I WOULD LEAVE ALL AND GO WHEREVER IT LED.

"I do not believe that the mere accumulation of worldly goods would satisfy any woman's heart—because I believe that away down deep in the heart of every daughter of Eve is a noble impulse that is her soul, and only when she satisfies that will success be sufficient.

Successful Wife Greater Than Fame

"While I am on the subject of Success I want to say, too, that I believe the home woman has just as much of a chance at success as the artist, the woman of the stage or the professional woman of any type—and that more often than not her success is the most satisfying. Success after all, is only achieving a result that adds something worthy to the world and that can be done in the home as well as anywhere else.

"Over the country I believe that it is an infinitely greater thing to be a successful wife and mother than to achieve any imaginary triumph on the operatic stage. In the one a woman serves only herself, while in the other she serves others and at the same time takes care of herself.

Duty of Holding a Husband's Love

"The woman who chooses the wife and mother's part has many cares that an opera singer selfishly escapes—the spiritual and physical care of children, the welfare of the home and last, and most important of all, THE DUTY OF HOLDING HER HUSBAND'S LOVE.

"Women, I think, very often slight this last responsibility. They think that once they are wives and mothers that love will stay with them, no matter what they do, and they very often fall into the habit that will most quickly drive it away.

"They forget, for instance, to keep alive the interest of the man who adores them; the neglect to keep alive their mental and physical charms, and they commit that frightfully fatal error of 'getting used to things.'

Would Make Life One Long Courtship

"If I were a wife I would keep my hair well groomed, my body exquisitely dainty; my manners as charming as I could entice; my clothing as attractive as I could obtain, and my enthusiasm over him and the gifts that he might bring me as fresh and as spontaneous as in the days when we were first in love.

"I would try to make my life one long courtship, because a love like that could lead me to marriage would be so precious a thing I should never want to lose it, nor the thrill that first made me happy.

"Another thing I wish wives wouldn't do is NAG. It is a beastly habit and one that never achieves anything. It never drives men up, and it always drives them away. I've personally known of more homes wrecked by it than from any other thing in the world.

Success Is Reward of Unremitting Labor

"Success in marriage isn't any different from success on the stage. It comes only as the reward of intelligent and unremitting labor, splendid sacrifice and a noble ambition, and to the woman who goes into it as I have into mine—and her whole heart—I am sure it is satisfying. The reward it brings, both materially and spiritually, makes her proud of its achievement and contented to leave accomplishments in other spheres to other women.

"The same is true of the professional life. If a woman throws her whole soul into her work and meets with success she can find contentment if Love fails to come, but if Love does come, I don't believe that any woman in the world would trade it for success.

O'DALY BEGINS PRISON TERM

Former City Cashier Spends First Day of Sentence in Solitude

Thomas J. O'Daly, former cashier in the office of the city treasurer, who was sentenced to from three to five years for larceny of $40,000, spent the first day of his sentence at State Prison today in solitary confinement.

O'Daly, who confessed to the larceny of city funds, expected to be given clerical work in the prison, it was said, but will be disappointed, according to Warden Elmer E. Shattuck.

The warden said there were no clerical jobs vacant and O'Daly would in all probability be assigned to work in the cloth shop by Deputy Warden William Hendry tomorrow.

FIND MAN'S BODY FLOATING IN WATER

Providence, June 22.—The body of a man that had been in the water so long that identification was impossible was discovered floating off Pojasquash Point, Bristol, by Edward F. Byrnes, Medical Examiner O. R. Sisson said today. Death and prompting death due to accidental drowning. The body was clothed in an undershirt and overalls and was that of an elderly man.

AUTO INJURIES TO BOROFSKY PAINFUL

Samuel H. Borofsky, the Boston attorney who was struck by a runaway automobile on Pemberton square hill yesterday, was reported to be suffering great pain from his injuries at his home, No. 62 Crawford street, Roxbury. Dr. Harry DeCrow, his secretary, who was injured at the same time, was attended at her home by her physician.

Smuts Warns Against Armament Race

London, June 22.—Jan Christian Smuts, premier of the Union of South Africa, warned the British empire against an armament race with the United States.

Addressing the imperial conference, the famous Boer statesman said:

"Armaments depend upon national policy. Ours should be such as to make a race for armaments impossible.

"The most fatal mistake of all, in my opinion, would be a race of armaments against America."

SCOUT FOUL PLAY IN GIRL'S DEATH

Miss DeLong, Decapitation Victim, Previously Tried to Commit Suicide

A temporary nervous breakdown, caused by overzealousness in religious duties, is believed by friends of Miss Philena DeLong to have led to her death. The decapitated body of Miss DeLong was found on the B. & A. tracks near the Cottage Farm bridge, Allston.

Miss DeLong, it is admitted, received a letter last Wednesday or Thursday from a Cambridge woman, in which the writer informed Miss DeLong that she was "not in the habit of having people call at my home for money." It is believed Miss DeLong's sensitive nature was injured by the tone of the communication.

Mrs. L. C. Loomis of No. 64 Marion street, Brookline, and Mrs. Amelia McCuen of No. 108 Pembroke street, were the woman's most intimate friends. Miss DeLong lived in Mrs. McCuen's home.

SCOUT FOUL PLAY.

Both scout the theory of foul play in connection with the death of the former Chinese missionary and church worker.

Mrs. Loomis has been an intimate friend of Miss DeLong for twenty years and was the last known person to have seen her alive. Mrs. Loomis said:

"Miss DeLong came to my home Saturday for a visit. She was her formerly my dressmaker and we were quite intimate. Although she broke down and cried Saturday, she was apparently in good spirits Sunday and Monday.

PREVIOUS SUICIDE ATTEMPT.

Mrs. Loomis admitted that she knew of one instance when Miss DeLong had attempted suicide by throwing herself into the Charles river.

Mrs. Amelia McCuen, who runs the lodging house at No. 108 Pembroke street, said:

"Miss DeLong has been rooming with me off and on for the past ten years and during that period she has been a most earnest church worker.

"She appeared nervous at times but I never noticed any signs of deep mental depression.

Miss DeLong is believed to have a sister living and a niece in Watertown. She told Mrs. McCuen of two nephews, who served in the World War, but never mentioned the addresses of her immediate relatives.

"Loving George" Breathes Devotion in His Letters

Ardent love letters, breathing undying devotion, will be part of the exhibit for the plaintiff in the $100,000 breach of promise suit brought by Dixie Esmond, former Boston chorus girl, against George H. Perkins, New York and Boston broker.

The epistles have come to be known as the "Loving George" letters to those in close touch with the case, and they are in the hands of Miss Esmond's counsel, and it is believed the broker will have to listen to the reading of the impassioned notes in court if he fights the case.

One of the letters sent to Miss Esmond at the Roosevelt Hospital in New York, is as follows:

"My Dear Own Dixie:

"On this beautiful morning, the first thought that came to me was how to my little sweetheart.

"You darling girl. All yesterday while you were so bravely undergoing your ordeal my thoughts were with you. Oh, how I only wished I could have been there to comfort and pet you, to stroke your pretty brown hair, to hold your hands and to have you feel the pressure of my presence to give you strength and courage.

"I had up Miss Chase several times to inquire how you were progressing and to tell me how you were getting on. Grateful, that you were standing the strain like a brave girl and that before the operation you were full of life and appeared like a ray of sunshine to the entire force.

"Oh, Dixie, my darling, I am looking forward to the time when you will be well, and I can crush you to my bosom and cover your lips with kisses, gaze into the azure depths of your sweet blue eyes and read in them the reflection of the love and adoration which my soul feels for you, my very owneest one.

"Oh, Dixie, it seems to me this operation has drawn us close to each other, and we will be in the future as two souls with but a single thought, two hearts that beat as one. I feel that my heart goes out to Miss Chase, Miss O'Connor and Miss Robinson on account of their kindness to my better self, which you are, my darling. Ever your loving sweetheart.

GEORGE."

Another letter written in 1920, reads:

"My dear own Dixie:

"Your letter from Detroit and received your loving letter. Will be in Boston Friday before Christmas and will wire you to meet me at station. Will also bring your trunk with me. Things are about the same with me and I hope you are better. Will you call me on long distance and I will pay the charge.

"As ever yours, GEORGE."

Many Small Taxes Declared Useless

Washington, June 22.—"Without embarrassment to the Treasury, we can repeal the excess profits tax, the transportation and freight taxes and the obnoxious small taxes, such as on ice cream, and substitute nothing at all for them but economy," Representative Martin B. Madden, Illinois, declared in the House. He produced statistics to show that the appropriations for 1922 would fall below $5,000,000,000, while the certain and estimated revenues would total more than $4,000,000,000.

SINK 'PRIDE' OF GERMAN NAVY

U. S. Destroyers Send Two U-boats to Bottom of Seas

By International News Service

On Board the U. S. S. Rail off Virginia Capes, June 22.—(By Wireless)—Remaining vestiges of the terror wrought by the German undersea warfare went to an ignominious end at the hands of the United States navy today.

The former German submarines U-140 and UB-48, which at one time cruised the North sea raiding allied commerce, helpless as the prey they formerly hunted, were quickly sent to the bottom by the guns of American destroyers.

Today's destruction is in accordance with a decision reached by the conference of Ambassadors which provides all former German submarines shall be at the bottom of the seas by July 1.

Officers of the Atlantic fleet watched the practice with intense interest and made careful records of the time it took for the destroyers to sink the U-boats in comparison with the time taken by the air forces yesterday.

'POCO' TAKEN TO PRISON CAMP

Louis "Poco" Bennett, who was serving a two-and-a-half-year sentence at Cambridge jail for the part he played in the holdup of the Lynn General Electric Company's paymaster in 1919, has been removed to the prison camp at North Reading.

The announcement is believed to have considerable significance in view of an item in Attorney-General Allen's specifications against District Attorney Pelletier in which the respondent is charged with failure to prosecute Nicholas Procopio, Frank Corcoran, Cambridge jail officials, for alleged conspiracy and larceny.

They were charged by Bennett with attempting to get $1,000 from him on the promise of getting bi mself.

According to the officials of the Commission of Corrections at the State House, Bennett was removed to a prison work camp on the application of Sheriff John R. Fairbairn.

At the jail it was said that he was taken to the camp that he might get "some real hard work."

GREGORY AGAIN IN TOILS

Former Well Known Figure at Brockton Fair, Newport, Held on Check Charge

"Count" Bernard F. F. Gregory, former society whip, a well-known figure at horse shows at Brockton Fair and at Newport and Narragansett Pier, is in the toils again, according to despatches from New York.

The "count," immaculately clad as his custom has always been, is languishing in the West 68th police station, awaiting examination on a charge of having passed a bad check for $150 on the Newport Trust Company, Newport, R. I.

Gregory, whose real name is said to be Barry Greenbaum, was at one time gentleman driver for Alfred G. Vanderbilt and Emil Boelig and is well known to society. He is also well known to the police, they declared, although the "Count" plaintively told the world that a grave mistake was made when he was arrested.

The arrest was made on complaint of Emil Hessel, manager of an art studio of No. 70 West Forty-eighth street, New York, who declared Gregory gave him a worthless check. In the West 68th police court the dapper, though elderly, horseman pleaded not guilty and was held in $2,000. Failure of his society friends to rally to his rescue forced his temporary retirement to a cell.

There he greeted reporters courteously and extended the hospitality of the Jail. Despite the fact that he had spent the night in durance vile, the "Count" was still a model of sartorial elegance. The black frock coat, sharply creased gray-striped trousers, gray spats and patent leather shoes were as spick and span as though he had just left the hands of a valet.

The "Count" held his pearl gray derby hat in one hand and a monocle swung from a silk cord about his neck.

"I am not a stranger to society," said he solemnly. "A European Countess once said of me, 'Count Gregory fences like a Frenchman, wrestles like a Roman gladiator, rides like an Arab and has the fighting disposition of an Irishman.'"

Despite the possession of all these virtues, Gregory remained in jail, much to his disgust, needless to state.

RANDOLPH SINGER WEDS EX-NAVY MAN

The bridegroom has been honorably discharged after having been attached to a submarine chaser squadron operating in the English Channel.

Bernard Goodfellow, No. 395 Cambridge street, was arrested, charged with breaking and entering the clothing store of Max G. Hershom, No. 44 Spring street, West End, and the larceny of $1,000 in cash. Later his case was continued to June 24 and he was held in $5,000.

ALLEGED STABBER WILL FACE TRIAL

Charged with manslaughter in connection with the fatal stabbing of Angelo Dentino at a christening party in North Lexington Sunday night, Edward Sanprini of Cambridge was held for the grand jury when arraigned in Concord district court. His bail was set at $5,000. Cupid's Bow Lips Latest Feat of French Surgery

DIAGRAM SHOWS HOW TWO STITCHES ARE TAKEN IN EACH SIDE OF THE MOUTH—SKIN GROWS TOGETHER AND CONTRACTS THEREBY ELIMINATING WRINKLES

Mrs. William B. Corey, formerly Mabelle Gilman, stage beauty, who has enhanced her charm by "sewed smile."

Ladies attention! Is your mouth that "perfect Cupid's bow" which is supposed to be the acme of pulchritude?

If not, don't worry. You can have alterations made to suit. Paris and New York surgeons have discovered the way, and now it's just as easy—so Mrs. William Ellis Corey who, as Mabelle Gilman, was wooed and won by Mr. Corey, former president of the United States Steel Trust, has had the operation performed, and her friends in Paris are reported to be raving about her added beauty and charm.

FRENCH SURGEON DOES TRICK.

A French specialist in beauty surgery did the trick for her at the Corey chateau in Paris and according to the accounts of the operation which have reached Boston it was a wonderful success.

When she was on the stage Mrs. Corey was known for her striking beauty. She was considered one of the most beautiful women in the United States.

Beauty specialists here and in New York say that the operation is a simple one.

To make the Cupid's bow or "sewed smile," the lips of the patient are cut deftly at each corner and caught together with two tiny stitches so as to take in whatever flesh is needed to bring the mouth to the desired size.

FULLNESS REMOVED.

The fullness is then taken from the lower lip by removing a strip of skin on the inside and the edges are sewn together to draw the lips in and decrease its drop. By drawing the skin tight at the corners any wrinkles will vanish. The tiny stitches are removed within a day or two and the scars heal within two weeks.

3 MONTHS FOR LIQUOR SELLING

Lawrence, June 22—In effort to curb wholesalers of moonshine in this city, Judge Mahoney sentenced Max Steinberg of 50 Elm street, Methuen, to three months in jail, in District Court here. The case was the outgrowth of a charge of illegal selling placed against Mrs. Gussie Herman, Lowell street, at whose place a quantity of illicit brew had been seized by the raiding squad. The woman testified that she had bought two gallons of moonshine from the alleged moonshine peddler for $14.

SURGEON LOSES LIFE FOR PATIENT

Philadelphia, June 22—Dr. J. H. Hartwell, a member of the staff of Anderson Hospital, and a former resident of Worcester, Mass., sacrificed his life for Kathryn Moss, a young patient, on whom he operated for appendicitis.

At a critical part of the operation he pricked his finger, but instead of attending to the small wound at the time he continued the operation.

The next day blood poisoning set in, resulting in his death.

18 ARRESTED IN SEAMAN'S SLAYING

Baltimore, June 22—Eighteen men are under arrest here and are being held as material witnesses following the slaying of Edward Larsen, twenty-four years old, a striking seaman, and a native of Denmark, who was shot and killed by a fellow-striker at the firemen's headquarters in the eastern part of the city.

E. P. Wilson, $800.

DR. COX GIVES OUT THE FACTS

After Wife's Wonderful Recovery He Took Tanlac Himself With The Same Astonishing Results.

When so many well known people of unquestioned integrity make statement after statement, each and everyone testifying to the same thing day after day, and each corroborating the other, the truth of such statements can no longer be doubted.

One of the latest to testify regarding Tanlac is Dr. T. R. Cox, a prominent dentist of Boston. Dr. Cox has parlors at 736 Tremont St., Hutchins Chambers, and resides at 19 Warwick St.

"The way Tanlac restored my wife's health and built her up," said Dr. Cox, "was so remarkable that I decided to try the medicine myself, and I am already feeling like a new man, although I have only taken two bottles. I was not sick, exactly, but my appetite had gone back on me and I was feeling considerably run down. Some days I worked all day without even feeling a desire for food, and then in the evening I would only eat something light and very little of that.

"I felt tired all the time and could hardly muster up energy enough to do my work. I was getting thin, too, for my clothes felt very loose on me. My condition became such a source of worry to me that my nerves were getting upset and I suffered greatly from loss of sleep.

"But Tanlac reversed the order of things with me in so short a time that it surprised me. It is simply wonderful how it stimulates the appetite and improves the digestion. Why, meal time doesn't come often enough for me now. Even though I am eating three hearty meals a day, some days I get so hungry I have to go out and buy a lunch.

"I must have gained at least ten or twelve pounds in weight, too, as I have had to let my belt out two or three notches. That nervous, worried feeling has left me and my sleep is so sound that someone has to call me in the mornings to keep me from oversleeping. Tanlac is a medicine of unusual merit. I am convinced of that fact, and I am glad to make this statement for what it may be worth to others who are in need of something to build them up."

Tanlac is distributed by International Proprietaries, Inc., and sold in Boston by all Liggett's drug stores.—Advertisement.

KING SEES NEW DAY FOR ERIN

Monarch, in Opening Ulster Parliament, Appeals for Peace in Ireland

By International News Service.

Belfast, June 22.—"A new era is opening," King George told the Northern Ireland (Ulster) Parliament today in a speech formally inaugurating this new law-making body.

The speech breathed the ardent wish that the attempt to solve the Irish problem now being made through the new home rule bill would prove successful.

"For all who love Ireland as I do, with all my heart, this is a profoundly moving occasion in Irish history," said the King.

The King referred to the happy days he had spent in Ireland as a midshipman in the British navy while he was Prince of Wales.

"I have watched Ireland with constant sympathy ever since," continued George. "I couldn't have allowed myself to give Ireland, by deputy alone, my earnest prayers and good wishes for the new era which is now opening.

"Therefore I came in person as head of the Empire to inaugurate this parliament, and came with deep-felt hope. This is a great, critical occasion of history in the six countries—an occasion that touches Ireland as a whole and finds an echo in the remotest parts of the empire."

(The six counties referred to by the King are those comprising Ulster province, which is represented by the new parliament).

The King expressed confidence that the important matters entrusted to the Northern Parliament would be managed with wisdom, moderation and fairness and that due regard would be given to every faith and every interest.

Few things are more earnestly desired by the English-speaking world than a satisfactory solution of the Irish problem, declared the King. He went on as follows:

"Certainly no wish is nearer my own heart than that every man of Irish birth, whatever his creed, wherever his home, should work with loyal co-operation with the free communities upon which the empire is built.

"My hopes are broader still. The eyes of the whole empire are upon Ireland today—that empire wherein many nations and races come together despite ancient feuds and in which nations have come to birth in the lifetime of the youngest to this hall.

"I am emboldened by that thought to look beyond the sorrow and anxiety which have clouded of late my vision of Irish affairs. I speak with a full heart when I pray that my coming today may prove the first step towards the end of strife amongst her people whatever the race, whatever the creed.

The King remarked upon the Royal yacht at 4 o'clock.

Disorders broke out in northern Belfast and there was considerable firing of revolvers. Three arrests were made.

FINDS NEW ENGLAND RIPE SAFETY FIELD

Charles W. Price of Chicago, general manager of the Massachusetts Safety Council, in an address at the Boston City Club yesterday, declared he considered New England the most fertile field for safety work in the country at the present time.

The National Safety Congress, which is to meet here in September, expects to carry Boston through an entire week without an accidental death, and every factory in the State will be asked to reduce its casualty record to a minimum.

President Howard Coonley has announced the appointment of Colonel Alfred P. Foote, commissioner of public safety, as chairman of the committee on No-Accident Week.

EQUAL PAY FOR TEACHERS OPPOSED

In the belief that equal salaries for men and women teachers would "make teaching unattractive to the virile type of man so greatly needed for the efficiency of the high schools," the English High School class of 1916 adopted a motion opposing any legislation of this kind. The motion copies of which were sent the mayor and chairman of the School Committee, said that equal pay would tend to limit the salaries of the men.

ROOSEVELT FAMILY SUES TO TEST NOTE

New York, June 21.—Suit was filed here today by the widow of Colonel Roosevelt and other members of the family to establish the validity of a claim for $60,000 upon the estate of the ex-President. The coplaintiffs with Mrs. Edith K. Roosevelt were Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., and George Emlen Roosevelt. All three sued as executors. The $63,909 claim was brought by Mrs. Emma Burkett, who holds a note in that amount for which she asserts Colonel Roosevelt went surety. The executors have rejected this note.

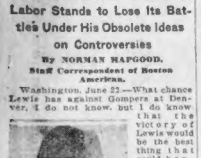
USEFULNESS OF GOMPERS GONE

Labor Stands to Lose Its Battles Under His Obsolete Ideas on Controversies

By NORMAN HAPGOOD.
Staff Correspondent of Boston American.

Washington, June 22.—What chance Lewis has against Gompers at Denver, I do not know, but I do know that the victory of Lewis would be the best thing that could happen to labor.



NORMAN HAPGOOD

Toward Mr. Gompers as an individual my feelings have always been friendly, but his usefulness is gone. He is behaving today exactly as he behaved a quarter of a century ago.

Comprehensible indeed is the loyalty that makes so many followers stick to him, even against their better judgment, because they wish not to humiliate him after his lifetime of service. We can appreciate personal loyalty and yet deplore it when it acts as an obstacle in the largest movement in the world.

20 YEARS BEHIND TIMES.

For the question of what labor is to gain in the struggles of today is the most important question confronting us. If it were well led in this country its chances of rapid progress in responsibility and shared control would be excellent. Led as Mr. Gompers leads it the probability is that it will lose almost every trick in the diplomacy between it and capital.

At the old game the present era of depression fa ors those elements that want to weaken the union. Mr. Gompers seems to understand nothing except wages and hours. Those were proper fighting points twenty years ago, but no man is a leader who confines his attentions exclusively to them today.

MUST BROADEN INTEREST.

Money wages must come down for a time. One thing for labor to do is to see that real wages do not come down; that is to say, money rates do not come down faster than cost of living. An even more important thing is to see that in such readjustments labor gains other essentials, such as regularity of employment, and such as an increasing share in management and a consequently increasing knowledge of the inside of business.

With none of the big organizations has labor shown itself capable of dealing to the greatest permanent advantage. This is true in the organizations that are unionized and in those that cease to allow unions.

GOMPERS DREADS NEW IDEAS.

Serious faults have crept into the unions themselves—survival and fossilizing of measures that once grew out of emergencies and now serve merely to deprive the unions of much confidence that might be theirs.

Mr. Gompers is afraid of these new creative ideas. He feels that if he ventures on any ground except the long-familiar ground of wages and hours he will be outplayed in the negotiations. If that fear is justified it merely shows how far he is from the leader for the present day.

The extent to which fear of the new absorbs him was shown at Denver when he chose for one of his subjects a talk on German labor.

RAISES 1914 ISSUE.

Cannot he understand that when he helps to keep alive these questions he is playing directly into the hands of the worst enemies of labor? Raising an issue of 1914 can do nothing but injury to the labor cause.

So with his readiness to throw a Bolshevik fit on every possible and impossible occasion. I expect him, within a day or two, to issue a statement asserting that our lost vessels were personally destroyed by Lenine.

In this Russian matter he is unintelligent as in the German matter. He is the most completely adjusted of all the men that has in its Russian State Department has in its Russian policy. He is the most useful ally-ant to the secret exploiting capitalists in their determination to use Bolshevik fireworks to make the country distrustful and alarmed over all the claims of labor to share in the determination of its own destinies.

I wish Mr. Gompers well. I wish he would realize voluntarily that his time has gone by and voluntarily make place for new men with contemporary ideas. When he went to England during the war and lectured the leaders there they were filled with amazement. It was stuff they outgrew two decades ago.

What Denver ought to do is to thank Mr. Gompers for the past and then put him where he cannot block the future.

News of Motion Picture World

By FRIEDA DAVIS

"When is an 'extra' not an 'extra'? Answer—When she's a famous person." Lady Parker, wife of Sir Gilbert Parker, the author, and Elinor Glynn, famous writer, act as "extras" in "The Affairs of Anatol." Cecil DeMille is giving directions about their scenes.

THE MOTION picture world lost a great director this week when George Loane Tucker died in Los Angeles. This artist, who worked such wonders with "The Miracle Man," "The Manxman," and "Virtuous Wives" was destined to do great things in films. His work with "The Miracle Man" showed that.

For some months Mr. Tucker has been very ill. He underwent several operations and gave every indication of rallying. It was felt sure that his youth, strength and vitality would put him back on his feet in short order. In order to hasten his recovery, he went to the Philippines for a rest and vacation. This only made him weaker and during the return trip he grew steadily worse.

His wife, known on the stage as Elizabeth Risdon, and his mother, Mrs. Loane Tucker, were with him when he died.

After his spectacular success with "The Miracle Man" Tucker was thrust into the limelight. He received quantities of offers from big producers and stars, but refused them all in order to become an independent producer like Griffith, Nellan, Ince and others. He had finished a second picture featuring Betty Compson, "Ladies Must Live," which will be released in the early Fall.

JACKIE COOGAN AND CO.

JACKIE COOGAN

THE most famous kid in the world is just employed to break another record.

And if there are any who doubt his claim to fame they are silenced by the announcement that this little star, the Jackie Coogan Productions Co.

pany, to be known as the Coogan Productions Co.

During his visit in the East, Jackie's father was deep in consultation about his youngster's future. After these conferences the West Coast Theatres, Inc., decided that they could do no better than sign up the boy to make five features a year. He will start filming his first story on July 15.

HERBERT RAWLINSON A STAR.

UNIVERSAL has decided to make a star of Herbert Rawlinson, who has been one of their feature players. Rawlinson has proved such a drawing card and box office asset that he is regarded as a special prize by that company.

Universal, according to report, are glad to have someone to counteract who can make some money for them. The officials of the concern are looking askance at the Von Stroheim special, "Foolish Wives," which seems more expensive and less near completion day by day. They already call it "The Folly of Von Stroheim." It has been impossible to decide when it will be ready for release.

"JANE EYRE" COMING.

HARRY BALLIN

HUGO Ballin has been so successful with his adapting old stories to the screen that he is to follow up "Bab's Lynne" and "Ave Maria" with a film version of Charlotte Bronte's novel "Jane Eyre."

Mabel Ballin, who played the leading role in "East Lynne" and "The Journey's End"—the releasing title for "Ave Maria"—will be seen as Jane. Norman Trevor will play opposite her in the role of Edward Rochester. Unlike his policy in "East Lynne" Mr. Ballin will stage the story in the period in which it was written.

CHINESE MOVIE COMPANY.

ORIENTAL art is having such a vogue these days that Chinese motion pictures should have a following. A company composed entirely of Chinese has started work at Hoyle Heights, Los Angeles, on a picture to be called "The Lotus Flower."

This concern is known as the Wah Ming Motion Picture Company. The executives, stockholders and workers are all Chinese. Leong Jung, usually known as James Leong, will act as supervising director. Mr. Leong had splendid training in this work under Griffith, with whom he worked in "Broken Blossoms."

JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER IS INTERESTED.

JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER'S first impression of the work of filming his story, "Gentle Julia," won't be easily forgotten. He had a conference with Richard Barthelmess, the star of the picture, Edmund Goulding, the scenarist, and Henry King, the director, at the Ritz-Carlton in Philadelphia at 4 o'clock the other afternoon.

Everyone agreed to let each person's views be aired on the subject of the best methods of filming. The views were so varied and so long that at 7:30 the next morning they were still going strong, and called it off in favor of breakfast. "I had no idea the time had passed!" Hergesheimer explained. "That's how they work in the movies!"

EILEEN PERCY, always an ardent enthusiast of the sport of sailing, will give up her sailing craft this Summer and will go in extensively for motor-boating. She is already negotiating for a powerful speed boat and expects to lower some records in California waters.

Monte Blue at the Park Theatre

ALLAN DWAN'S productions are always satisfying and Monte Blue's work is always more satisfying, yet in their newest picture, "The Broken Doll," at the Park Theatre this week, there is something lacking. The story has been well put on, the direction is good, and the cast is excellent, but the story lacks plausibility.

Tommy Dawes, a young mountaineer who has come down to the farm-lands to work, has become so much endeared to his employers that they plan to adopt him. He has been like a brother to their little crippled daughter, Mary. He breaks the child's doll and, a trifle unnaturally, lies to her about it and steals the money to buy her another, considering that he had just saved the girl's life heroically, and that the family felt the greatest gratitude toward him, it would seem a simple matter to arrange to get another doll without dishonesty. But that's the way the story goes.

Tommy meets an escaped convict, has the money stolen, steals it back and, after varied adventures, lands back at the farm with a new doll, the stolen money intact, and a sweetheart.

The picture is well worth seeing for the work of Monte Blue as Tommy. Blue has the greatest appeal to the audience. He has naturalness and plays with feeling. In "The Broken Doll" he brings out the qualities of Tommy that make him act as he does, but in a part with more comedy element he appears to better advantage.

CAMERA CLICKS

NAOMI CHILDERS

THERE was no surprise in the film world when Naomi Childers married Luther Reed, the scenarist, on Wednesday. They have been engaged for some weeks, but were working at opposite ends of the United States. Miss Childers, a Goldwyn player, has been appearing in films on the West coast, while Mr. Reed has been writing continuities in New York. He is the author of the stage success, "Dear Me."

NAZIMOVA and her husband, Charles Bryant, are coming East soon to be here for the Carpentier-Dempsey fight on July 2. They will arrive here a day or so before the event and will leave for Los Angeles the day after. Real fans!

SUES FLAGLER FOR MEMORIAL TO WIFE

New York, June 22.—John H. Flagler, multi-millionaire steel and oil man, who married Beatrice Wennoker, his third wife, April 13, is being sued for $75,000 by George B. Bender of No. 121 East One Hundred and Sixty-sixth street.

According to Bender this amount is compensation for organizing and incorporating the Society of Justice, a memorial to Mrs. Alice Mandeville Flagler, the oil man's first wife. The society was to aid innocent persons sentenced to prison, and Bender declared he was offered $5,000 for his five-months' work, but refused, believing the amount inadequate.

TOURISTS SEEK BERKSHIRES

Run Through Historic Hill Country Finds Favor With Autoists

There is no more favorite touring section for automobile owners in the eastern part of the United States than the Berkshire Hills. In this region there is a wonderful combination of natural beauty in mountains, lakes and streams with the view enhanced at many points by the skill of the architect and the landscape gardener.

Names of national fame in art, literature and statesmanship are associated with many of the Berkshire towns, and it will add much to the interest of a visit to know that Hawthorne's "House of the Seven Gables" was written in Stockbridge, and that the dashing water courses of this region were the direct inspiration of some of Bryant's finest poems.

Many motorists will desire to visit this rugged country within the next few weeks. The run from Boston is through Arlington, Groton, Fitchburg and Athol to Greenfield, then over the Mohawk Trail, entering the Berkshires at North Adams and Williamstown.

The hotels in the Berkshires are now open. The present is an ideal time to motor through and spend from a few days to as many weeks on the by-ways and country roads that offer easy passage all through the mountains.

What Autoist Needs on Long Distance Trip

Things you need on long distance automobile trip:

Set of ignition brushes, boxed and labeled.

A compact tow rope.

Jack and handle and two blocks of wood to rest jack on.

Box of plungers for tube valves.

Wrench for interrupter points.

File for cleaning the points.

Hydrometer of voimeter for testing storage battery.

Box of assorted nuts, assorted cap screws, lock washers and cotter pins.

Spool of copper and one of soft iron wire.

Extra set of electric light bulbs.

Clear rags and waste.

Set of fuses, if used on car.

Folding canvas pail.

Full set of tire chains and chain tool, extra cross links.

All of these things should be put into as small boxes as possible and all of them labeled as they will be seldom used.

While the tour planned along good State roads may read very nice from the guide book, you must take it with a grain of salt. This year there will be many detours, where roads are being repaired, and dirt roads on a wet day are so slippery that three or even four tire chains are needed, that the front wheels may be kept on the road as well as the rear ones. (I made the cross-country trip last year, so be warned.) Always carry an extra gallon of oil and unless your car is a reserve gasoline tank on the car, take a gallon of gasoline. This is usually sufficient to carry you to a gas station.

Remember that morning and evening in high altitudes especially, or stormy days, call for added wraps. Carry an extra sweater, raincoats and rubbers. It might be necessary to change tires in the mud. And watch out for speed cops along the way. They're mean to tourists.

NASH BUYERS GET PRICE PROTECTION

"The Nash Motors Co. was among the last to increase the price of its product during the war period, and the percentage of increase was far below the majority of other manufacturers," said C. F. Rockwell in a recent interview.

"The policy of the Nash Co. is to build a better car at a fair price rather than a cheaper one at a reduced price.

"In order to protect customers against price reduction, C. F. Rockwell, head, is guaranteeing to refund on Nash cars sold at retail any reduction which may be made in the list price on or before October 1.

"This will enable those who have been anticipating a reduction to make the purchase now and be assured of price protection."

ASK MR. FIX IT

Dear Mr. Fixit: Kindly inform me how it is that when I have my gas down about six or seven notches my Ford starts to bump and kress banning until I either retard or increase the gas. Then it runs fine.—J. M.

It is pretty hard to tell what causes this in your car without the car to look over. Would suggest that you take this to some Ford station where the car can be seen.

Dear Mr. Fixit: I have a 1920 Ford. Recently I broke the drive-shaft housing and replaced it with a new one. Now I have a very disagreeable whining noise. After running the car a half mile I heard a grating noise apparently in the transmission. It doesn't sound like broken teeth. It is a constant grating. Can you tell me where the trouble is?—J. M. Boston.

You probably have tightened your transmission bands too much when you put the new housing on. Don't touch the gear all the time. This will not detract from your power and will be tight enough to pull the load. If you put on new brake shoes in the rear wheels these may be binding a little. Put a little oil on them and they will wear down without trouble.

Motor Mart Club can tell me where the specialty twin for spark plugs are made as well as have other useful items made, but cannot find out where they are manufactured. Hoping you will give me the desired information.—C. H. Boston, Mass.

Write to the Twin Spark Plug Company, 1700 Broadway, New York City, for this.

Will you kindly tell me how to figure the piston displacement of a Ford car, and oblige?—P. H. D. Melrose, Mass.

Find how far your car will run on a gallon of gas; that is, measure the distance on your speedometer. Then jack up the rear end of car and take the circumference which gives your tires for miles and figure out the rest. Add about 50 per cent of the part of your car for decreases each year and the 1921 will give you approximately the value which it is impossible to figure in advance.

SAYS ENGLAND IS FOR "RECOGNITION"

William J. Whelan of Tipperary told his audience at a meeting in Milton Town Hall that England would gladly welcome recognition of the Irish republic by the United States, claiming that in this way Britain would find an honorable way out of the present Irish difficulties.

OFFICER RESCUES MAN WITH LADDER

Thrown suddenly into the water after his shell had collided with a motor boat on the Charles River, off the Bay State road, James E. Prasse of No. 32 Centre street, Brookline, was rescued by Officer Donohue of the Back Bay station, who threw one end of a ladder to Fraser as the frail craft sank.

$6,000 to Be Distributed Among Successful Ones In Novel Trial of Skill

Two hundred and twenty readers of the Boston American will be made happy in the early Fall when checks go out from this office to winners in the $6,000 Songs of the World Title Test.

Ten, receiving checks for $1,000, $750, $500, $400, $300, $200, $150, $100 and $50, will be a little happier than the rest.

There will be two checks of the $1,000 variety.

And all for choosing and writing correct titles!

The Songs of the World Title Test will continue for sixty days. This is the thirteenth day. Any resident of New England or Canada may enter the Test at any time. Enrollment is not limited. Ten days or two weeks hence there will be one printing of all back pictures.

CORRECT TITLE IN LIST.

In the List of Titles printed with today's picture is the Correct Title of that picture.

Finding it should be easy.

Write or paste the correct title on the line reserved for the purpose immediately below the picture and your "work" will be done for today.

Every three days there will be a similar List of Titles, containing the correct title of the current picture.

Finding the correct title will not always be as easy as it is today. The artist does not mean that you shall get EVERY title. The Test is a contest, in which skill and ingenuity must be shown.

It is possible that the highest number of correct titles submitted at the end of the Song Title Test will not be above 10 or 15. That will not affect the distribution of the awards. When titles have been examined and checked, Official List awards will be distributed as follows to those who have sent in the largest numbers of Correct Titles:

One First Award	$1,000
One Second Award	1,000
One Third Award	750
One Fourth Award	500
One Fifth Award	400
One Sixth Award	300
One Seventh Award	200
One Eighth Award	150
One Ninth Award	100
One Tenth Award	50
160 Awards of $10 each	1,600
10 Awards of $5 each	50
Total	$6,000

ONE AWARD TO A FAMILY.

Every title used in the List of Titles will be the title of a song. Observe that they are called Songs of the World.

The List of Titles may be changed without notice. It will be changed today, however, that the List contains "today's" title. One title in the List will fit the picture before it and no other title in the List. This does not mean that there will not be other titles which "appear" to fit. Only the Correct Title will fit BETTER than any other.

All the members of the family may take part in the Test and each may submit an individual list of Correct Pictures and Correct Titles, but only one award will be made to a family.

In the recent Movie Play Title Test there were three instances of close coincidence among the prize leaders, as the List was originally prepared. Three participants volunteered to draw on the fate of the tie called to their attention. If the rule of the contest had been followed, there would have divided $2700, scarcely fair to other participants.

Almost daily now it reads these lines probably is able to finish among the 220 winners; only those who go to the trouble, study the Test, the pictures and the Lists of Titles from every possible angle, will stand among the Big Ten.

It is not necessary to buy the Boston American to take part in the Test. Free hand or tracing paper copies of the Test pictures will be quite acceptable as Test Pictures clipped from the paper.

Title selections may not be sent in before the end of the Test. The pictures and the Lists of Titles will appear on week-days only, exclusively in the Boston American.

$2,500,000 Worth of Girls Graduate From Radcliffe

Radcliffe College will release $2,500,000 worth of sweet girl graduates upon a waiting world today.

Three brides will be prominent among the 104 members of the graduating class.

The "emphatization" of today's class was scientifically arrived at by the class statistical demon.

The average earning capacity of college-bred girls is $1,200 per year.

On a five per cent. basis that entitles each graduate to an individual capitalization of $25,000. Ask any business man. So there you have it! But there are several young men who think these figures grossly underestimated.

They are the bridegrooms of Radcliffe girls in the class, and each thinks his girl alone worth at least $1,000,000.

Edith MacBride Traysor of Philadelphia and Eunice Eddy Braaten of Auburn, N. Y., are two of the Radcliffe, 1921, brides.

Miss MacBride was married to Lewis Traysor of the Harvard Graduate School in 1920. They will live in New York, where he will practice law.

Miss Eddy married Ingvald T. Braaten of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. She and her husband will go to Norway, where he has a scholarship to study hydroelectricity.

Miss Kathleen Ellen Hartwell is "the smartest girl at Radcliffe and gives evidence of the greatest promise." This is the opinion of the confidential board at Radcliffe where Miss Hartwell, who graduates today, was winner of the Captain Jonathan Fay diploma.

B. C. SENIORS HEAR CARDINAL

124 Receive Diplomas; Class Day Proves to Be Mirth Feast

With the frivolity of yesterday's annual Class Day over, the 124 seniors of Boston College turned today to the exercises in connection with the awarding of their degrees and diplomas at Alumni Field.

Following the exercises Cardinal O'Connell broke ground for the new science building, first of the group to be erected with the recently raised $2,000,000 fund. The alumni banquet and election under a tent on the campus will be held in the evening.

Three thousand parents, friends and relatives saw the staid seniors forsake their dignity to celebrate Class Day. First on the mirth-provoking program was the introduction of "Dr. Einstein" by Class President Charles A. Coyle. The "doctor's" explanation of his theory, however, was interrupted by a manacled prisoner, Daniel J. McSweeney, who claimed better ability to explain the theory by reason of being a "bigger nut than Einstein. He was eventually led back to his cell.

Everett J. Ford declaimed the class poem and then the Sophomores presented a take-off of the day in a burlesque on the coming Dempsey-Carpentier bout.

The class prophesy by John J. Burns of Cambridge featured the college commencement of 1946 and ended with a mass "mystery stunt" proved to be "Thomas Edison" propounding a set of questions to a group of college graduates.

The exercises ended with the Tower oration by Eugene J. Sullivan of Wakefield.

LACK OF FIELD KEPT MAXIM FROM FLYING

Lack of an aviation field in Boston was all that prevented Hiram Percy Maxim, famous inventor, from flying here from Hartford, Connecticut, to attend the reunion banquet of the class of '88, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he told his thirty-five classmates. Today, the members of the class took a tilt along the north shore, and tomorrow they will visit the south shore.

GANG SWINDLES WEALTHY MEN

Big Wire Tapping Scheme Revealed in Raid at Middletown, R. I.

Providence, June 22.—The discovery that a gang of wire tappers, including two women, had swindled a number of prominent men out of thousands of dollars in the past few weeks was made when the police raided a cottage in Renfrew Park, Middletown.

Although the game had flown when the trap was sprung the police are said to have good descriptions of members of the gang, and their arrests are expected.

The raid resulted from information reported from Edmund P. Dewey, a Woonsocket truckman, who reported that five men and two women had attempted to get $25,000 from him. Dewey suspected the swindlers, although deceived for a time by their unusual methods of approach.

The same gang is said by the police to have obtained $11,000 last week from Louis Moreau, a retired Honor dealer of Webster, Mass., and $25,000 from Samuel Riesbaupt of Pawtucket.

The methods used were the same in all instances, according to the police, and were highly successful. Pocketbooks filled with money and also containing the name and address of a member of the gang were dropped in the path of the prospective victim. On returning the money the victim was rewarded with "some thing" tips on horse races. He was then taken to the Middletown bungalow, where the wire-tapping feature of the program was carried out. In each case the "tappers" spoke of contraband whiskey which they claimed had been seized by the government and which, they asserted, they had in their possession and would sell at a reasonable figure.

According to Dewey's story to the police, he met a man who gave the name of Burns, while visiting in Newport. The two walked in Touro Park, where they discovered a wallet on the ground.

Little Terrier Finds Friend in Wealthy Brookline Home

How a poor little tyke of an Irish terrier dragged his weary, wounded self to the door of one of the wealthiest families in Brookline and there found the sympathy of the true dog lover was revealed in a touching tale told by Dr. Frank J. Sullivan, of the Animal Rescue League, Carver street.

According to Dr. Sullivan the little dog had evidently been struck by an automobile and his jaws broken. He crawled to the door of the Brookline residence and scratched until he attracted attention.

The man of the house, whose name Dr. Sullivan withheld, picked the little fellow up and ordering his car, hurried with him to the Rescue League.

Upon examination it was found that the most humane disposal of the little terrier was to put him out of his misery.

SEES WAR WITH JAPAN SOON

Conflict With United States Inevitable, Declares W. D. Vanderlip

New York, June 22.—Back from an extended stay in Russia Washington D. Vanderlip, head of a syndicate of California financiers, predicted today that war between the United States and Japan was inevitable.

Vanderlip, who arrived on the Olympia, was in Russia inspecting the vast Kamchatka coal, lumber and fisheries grants which his syndicate recently obtained from the Moscow government.

"Russia and China," said Vanderlip "have entered into a treaty designed to drive the Japanese from the Asiatic coast. An attempt will be made to force Japan out of Shantung as soon as Russia is able to furnish the Chinese with arms. That will be very shortly.

"Japan then will establish a formal blockade of the Chinese and Siberian coasts and it will be up to the United States to go in and break the blockade. That's how the war is going to start."

Defense Opens in South Braintree Murder Case, Will be Alibi

The defence in the trial of Nicola Sacco of Stoughton and Bartolomeo Vanzetti of Plymouth, charged with murdering Paymaster F. A. Parmenter and Guard Alessandro Berardelli at South Braintree fifteen months ago, opened today in Dedham Superior Court.

Attorneys J. J. McAnarney and William Callahan, stated the defence of both men would be an alibi.

In his opening address, Attorney Callahan said:

"The defendants intend to offer themselves as witnesses. The defence will be made of two parts. It will offer witnesses who were at or near the scene of the crime. They will tell you what they saw and who they saw—with reference to the defendants.

"The defendants will explain in person what they were doing on the day of April 15, 1920, the day of the murder.

"The defendants will not only explain in person where they were at the time the crime was committed, but also where they were throughout that entire day. Vanzetti will offer himself as a witness and will tell you his experiences from the time he landed in this country from Italy."

Callahan said evidence would be introduced to show that Sacco received a letter telling of his mother's death and father's illness. "This letter came shortly before the day of the murder, and so he decided to go back to Italy."

"Sacco will tell you," said Callahan, "that on the day of the murder he went to Boston on an early train. He will tell you of going to the Italian consul's office, of having taken a picture of himself, wife and child into the consul's office.

"He will tell you of his experience in the Italian consul's office, of how the picture was not the right size and that he went out to get another picture.

GEN. CHARLES H. TAYLOR DEAD

Veteran Editor of the Globe Passes Away in His 75th Year

teen, a compositor at nineteen, a reporter at nineteen, private secretary to the Governor of Massachusetts at twenty-two, a magazine publisher at twenty-five, member of the Legislature at twenty-six and clerk of the House of Representatives and publisher of the Globe near his twenty-seventh birthday, he was yet well under forty when he left the obstacles in his career behind him and could firmly in his hands the guarantee of a well earned success.

He was born almost in the shadow of the battle monument on Bunker Hill, July 14, 1846. His father, John Ingalls Taylor, was a native of Salem, and his mother, Abigail Hapgood, was born in Hudson, Mass. He was a pupil in the Charlestown High School when he became a printer's boy, at $2 1-2 cents a day, in an office at No. 22 School street, where several weekly journals were printed and his work was done. After leaving that first employment his prophetic feet brought him to a concern on Spring street which made presses to amateur printers. Thinking that he had not enough to do there, he left the trade with a toy whip thought he had too much to do, swapping his lighter task, with its $1.50 a week, for a heavier one at $2 a week on the Boston Evening Traveler.

SOLDIER OF THE UNION.

At the outbreak of the Civil War the boy was not yet fifteen and he waited only until he was sixteen to enlist. He was accepted as a private in the 25th Massachusetts and became one of the youngest soldiers in the great war for the Union.

After serving more than a year with General Banks' command in the Gulf region he was wounded in the memorable assault on Fort Hudson, June 14, 1863.

Returning to the Traveler office, it was not long until the apprentice was enrolled as a journeyman printer.

At nineteen he became a regular member of the city department of the Traveler, where he quickly rose to the rank of a star reporter, fitted for the responsibilities of distant and important assignments. Among these was the celebrated Fenian raid on Canada, where he successfully completed all the most correspondents of the press from all parts of the country.

EDITOR AND LEGISLATOR.

While reporting the Massachusetts Senate for the Traveler, the young reporter was introduced to politics and the politician. This acquaintance obtained for him, at the time of William Claflin's inauguration in 1869, the appointment of private secretary to the Governor, with the rank of colonel on his staff. But in his three years of service in that post he continued to carry on a regular correspondence with several important dailies, and also maintained unbroken his relations with the press.

At the end of Governor Claflin's term Colonel Taylor stepped directly from the executive chamber to the House of Representatives of 1872, having been unanimously elected a member from the city of Somerville.

Although he was succeeding in politics, he did not permit it to become his business, and his faithful feet carried him once more into the path of journalism. Founding the American Homes, he became a pioneer in the 15-cent magazine field. At the same time, in its selection of matter, in its features and departments, that journal was a prophecy of what the Boston Globe was to be under his direction in after years. But with a steadily growing circulation of 40,000 copies and with every assurance of success, the whole structure of the young publisher's hopes and plans was obliterated in the fire which laid Boston fire of 1872. The fire was his brain.

Colonel Taylor had lately been re-elected to the Legislature, and before the form of the new body began the old body was again in extraordinary session on account of the conflagration. It was a period of bitter schisms in the politics of the State, and the young member from Somerville was not in sympathy with the old regime, but was active among those who thought it time that new men and new measures had a hearing at court. Naturally enough, when the opponents of the conservative rule determined to make a change in the office of clerk of the House of Representatives, he was selected as their candidate for the place and was elected after an exciting contest with the "Old Guard."

MANAGER OF THE GLOBE.

Shortly after he entered upon the clerkship of the House he was asked to take the management of the Boston Daily Globe. The Globe had been started on March 4, 1872, under the direction of Malvin M. Ballou, and already had lost $100,000 and was plunging deeper and deeper into the hole at the rate of $1,500 a week. Was it attractive from literary and typographic points of view, but its adlining price was four cents a copy and the quality of its circulation exceeded its quantity.

Colonel Taylor declined to assume the management, but, after congratulating himself on his escape from an unpromising task, the offer was so urgently renewed in August, 1872, that he agreed to go to the rescue and stand by until the Legislature reassembled in its annual session. The controlling hand which he then laid on the lever of the Globe never was lifted in all the years that passed.

He continued with the Globe, not because the undertaking proved to be easier than he had feared, but because the existence of the paper was so precarious during the next five years that he could not leave it without sacrificing the interests of the men who had confided it to his care. He had enlisted for the Summer, but, like a true soldier, he re-enlisted for the war. It was a desperate fight, and in the thick of it his labors were limited only by the necessities of sleep, his office hours ranging from 8:30 to the morning till 11:30 at night.

HAND-TO-HAND STRUGGLE

What gave the Globe its new life with the new management that began in 1873?

The young manager brought to its aid no money of his own. The only capital that General Taylor—for Colonel Taylor, as this private soldier of the Civil War was then called by reason of his secretaryship to Governor Claflin—could put into the Globe was his character, intelligence and energy. With these tangible assets, he barely managed to keep the paper a jump ahead of the sheriff through four or five long years of a hand-to-hand struggle.

After $100,000 had been sunk amid the original stockholders, except Ben D. Jordan, had abandoned the paper as a forlorn hope, Col. Taylor reorganized and revolutionized the Globe. He started the Sunday Globe on Oct. 14, 1877, the Evening Globe on March 7, 1878, and he sweetened the pauper oil for the broader issues pursued in his fortunes and to his own interests.

In the new departure the Globe almost immediately found there was a turning in the long lane of adversity, and it amply verified the sagacity of its conductor.

DEAN OF PUBLISHERS.

At the time of his death Gen. Taylor had a longer service than any other editor or publisher on the American press. When he assumed the management of the Globe, Messrs Andrews, Pulsifer and Haskell were the owners of the Boston Herald. Col. Charles O. Rogers, the builder of the Boston Journal, had been dead about four years and Col. W. W. Clapp had succeeded him. Col. Charles H. Greene still was the editor of the Post and Col. Eulard Worthington the head of the Transcript & C. P. Waters was business manager and Mr. Goddard the editor of the Daily Advertiser. Henry W. Dutton & Son were the owners of the Transcript and Daniel M. Haskell was its editor.

Gen. Taylor often expressed the belief that the underlying principle of any life well lived lies in the readiness to meet opportunity, whether it be the opportunity to gain money, power or knowledge, the opportunity to speak a kind word or do a good deed.

The loyalty of General Taylor to the companions of his early manhood was not affected by any change in his fortunes. He never forgot or lost a friend. For years he remained the active president of the Algonquin Club in Boston and was, besides a member of a number of other social organizations. Golf was his favorite diversion.

For his own staff was reserved the closest view of his kindly nature and upright character, manifested by a patriarchal interest in all who in any way served the Globe. "In the first six years of my connection with the Globe," he said, "my great and constant difficulty was to meet the weekly payroll, for some sixty men and their families were depending on me to provide the means of paying their grocers' and butchers' bills. I could stand off creditors in general with a cheerful unbalance after a little practice of that art; but these people looked to me for their living and I am glad to say that I never failed them. After prosperity came, following a loss of $50,000 a year for five years, that nightmare of the payroll passed away and left me more time to develop the general business of the paper.

"Often when a man leaves an employer he takes delight the rest of his life in trying to injure him. Every old Globe man, on the contrary, feels a staunch attachment for the paper and cherishes pleasant memories of his active connection with it."

Marrying at twenty-one the daughter of George W. and Lovilla Bearing Davis, this happy companionship continued until July 14, 1913, when Mrs. Taylor died at their Summer home at Buzzards Bay. They had three sons and two daughters. The eldest son, Charles Henry, Jr., is manager, and the second son, William Osgood, business manager, of the Globe. The youngest, John Irving, is interested in real estate. The older daughter is the wife of Horace D. Pillsbury of San Francisco, and the younger the wife of Matthew C. Armstrong of Hampton, Va.

Gen. Taylor's Winter residence was at No. 324 Commonwealth avenue and his Summer home was at Buzzards Bay, where, with nearly a mile and a half of water front, he had a beautiful estate of eighty acres, which he shared with his children and grandchildren.

Fresh From Paris

PARIS, France

THE formal afternoon frock at the left, after the manner of several very new models by Renee, Rolande and Premet, proves its confidence in the deep fringe, and is amply repaid by the grace it achieves. Also like these models, it employs black crepe de chine as its tissue. Several strands of fringe falling from the top of the shoulder take the place of sleeves. The crepe skirt is slit into points over a petticoat of black chiffon, and fringe hangs between the points, the skirt having three different lengths. As a trimming for a small crepe hat the odd new parrot feathers are used.

THE dress-and-wrap mode is increasing in popularity each day, to judge by the number seen at the Longchamps races and along the Bois. Early in the Spring wool fabrics were employed, and in many instances the three-piece tailleur consisted of matching frock and coat. Now that this mode has carried over the Summer, the cape is almost any length seems to have supplanted the coat, and shantung and the crepes are preferred tissues. The model at the right is of rust colored Canton crepe, trimmed with bands of wide tan lace. The collarless circular cape is lined with tan chiffon. The tan felt hat (and, by the way, felt has apparently come to stay for the duration of the hot weather) is trimmed with coq feathers.

REFUSED KISS FROM DOCTOR

Miss Peabody Says Barrell Made Love Pretending to Study Geology

leth Barrell of No. 208 Commonwealth avenue, daughter of the late Albert A. Folsom, who was superintendent of the old Boston & Providence railroad, was not a fit person to have the custody of the children.

He testified at that time that his wife was friendly with A. Franklin Goodwin, a wealthy Commonwealth avenue resident, and that Mrs. Barrell wore a silk kimono while entertaining Goodwin.

The previous year the Barrells were engaged in litigation over the title to the Newall farm at York Harbor, Me., which Mrs. Barrell claimed her husband bought with her money and put in his own name. The court ruled that Dr. Barrell must pay his wife $9,600 as a repayment to her for her contribution towards purchasing the house.

TRIED TO KISS HER.

In Miss Peabody's affidavit, which was read by Attorney Proctor, the geological incident was said to have occurred at Bald Head Cliff. She said that she and the doctor strolled to the cliffs, where he suggested that they talk of love.

He put his arms around her, the affidavit stated, and when she remonstrated, asking him to remember his wife, he said: "She's a damn fool. She's crazy. Never mind her."

The doctor then tried to kiss Miss Peabody, the affidavit stated, with the result that her sweater was torn in the consequent struggle. An affidavit from the young woman's mother was also read, in which she told of seeing the doctor drinking in New York and York Harbor, Me., and quoted him as making remarks derogatory to his wife. The Barrells have been living apart for some years.

Overruling protests by Attorneys Nason and Proctor for Mrs. Barrell, who wished the case continued for a considerable period, Judge Flynn set next Friday as the date of the next hearing.

INDICT LABOR CZAR FOR MAIL LOOTING

Chicago, June 22—A blanket indictment charging "Big Tim" Murphy, Chicago "labor czar," Vincenzo Cosmano and other others with complicity in the $350,000 Polk street station mail robbery April 6, was returned by the Federal Grand Jury today.

Murphy and Cosmano later were arraigned before Federal Commissioner Foster on the charges contained in the indictments.

ITALIAN DEPUTIES COME TO BLOWS

Rome, June 22—Fresh disorders occurred in the Chamber of Deputies today, following the spectacular clash of yesterday, when Minister of Labor Labriola resigned. The trouble was between the Socialists and the Fascisti or extreme Nationalists. Threats led to blows. The labor minister openly sided with the Socialists and upon being rebuked by Premier Giolitti walked to the government bench and threw down his resignation in front of the premier.

NORTH SHORE BUILDERS FIRM

Members of the North Shore Building Trade Employers' Association voted today to stick by their offer of seventy cents an hour for masons' hod carriers. They reject a compromise of seventy-five to seventy-eight cents an hour, suggested by the men, who have been on strike for two weeks. The workers originally demanded eighty cents.

9 YEARS WITHOUT DAY OF ABSENCE

Nine years attendance at school without being absent or late a day is the unusual record of Miss Anna M. Martin, seventeen years old, daughter of Mrs. Alice Martin of No. 47 Market street, Cambridgeport. Miss Martin was among those who recently graduated from St. Mary's Parochial High School, Cambridgeport. She took a classical and business course while at school and also is studying the piano.

OPEN SHOP FOR TRAWLERS

More than six hundred union fishermen on steam trawlers operating out of Boston have accepted a cut of 66 per cent. in wages and 50 per cent. in bonus money, and have agreed that the trawlers shall be operated in future on the open shop basis.

The cut in wages and bonus was made necessary by a slump in the fishing industry since last Fall.

The new basis of pay for the men is $45 a month with a bonus of $7 on each $1,000 earned by the trawler. The old rate was $120 a month and $10 on each $1,000 earned.

The price of fish has dropped even more than this cut in wages. Fish that was selling at from $7 to $10 a hundred weight at the time the higher rates went into effect have sold as low as $1 a hundred weight and now averaging $2.50 per hundredweight.

ACCUSED BROKER SURRENDERS

Charles K. Hogan is Charged With Larceny From Brighton Bank

pending. He is represented by Attorney John P. Feeney.

Hansen was sentenced for his share of the bank looting, which was one of the sensations of the Winter of 1918-1919.

Hogan, former Quincy resident, recently in business in East Orange, N. J., has been a mysterious element in the bank theft sensation since it was sprung upon the public, nearly three years ago. He is supposed to be a cousin or other relative of Hansen.

HANSON'S WIFE TO TESTIFY.

Hansen's pilferings were discovered when a bank shortage was disclosed. The shortage, in turn, came to light when City Treasurer Murray withdrew city funds, fearing a collapse.

Hansen confessed to the defalcations and said they had extended over several years, the police then declared.

He said he stole the money for speculation. During the trial his pretty young wife was loyal to him and staunchly defended him.

It is expected that she will be a witness against Hogan when he comes to trial.

Hogan was today taken to the Supreme Court for arraignment. At the time of Hansen's trial it was openly stated that Hogan, alleged relative, had a hand in the fun on the bank's funds.

It was predicted that if Hogan ever came to trial a situation resembling the famous Coleman case would be disclosed.

At your store this week

Your dealer will give you a 10-Day Tube of Pepsodent if you present the coupon at any store named below.

Do this for your own sake—for your family's sake. Watch how your teeth improve. The delightful effects will very soon convince you what is best.

Every application of Pepsodent brings five distinct results. And modern authorities consider all of them essential.

Now a world method

In many countries Pepsodent is fast displacing old teeth cleaning methods. Dental authorities the world over endorse it. Careful people must adopt it sooner or later, for old methods are not right. With them, tooth troubles and discolorments have become almost universal. A change must come, and now is the time to start it.

Prettier Teeth Next Week

If you will now start this delightful test

This is to offer you a way to whiter teeth, cleaner, safer teeth. Such glistening teeth as millions now enjoy.

Your dealer will give you the means. Get it and watch the effects. See your teeth grow prettier—note how clean they feel.

Dentists everywhere advise this method. Millions of homes have adopted it. Try it this week, for your own sake. Learn what it means to you.

To remove the film

Your teeth are coated with a dingy film. It is viscous—you can feel it with your tongue. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays. It clouds the teeth and causes most tooth troubles.

To ordinary tooth paste does not effectively combat it, so the tooth brush has left much of it intact. As a result, teeth lose their luster. And, despite all brushing, tooth troubles have been constantly increasing.

The film is what discolors, not the teeth. Film is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Many other serious troubles are also traced to them.

Science combats it

Dental science has long sought ways to combat that film. The ways have now been found. Able authorities have amply proved them. Leading dentists everywhere advise their daily use.

The methods are embodied in a new-day tooth paste—Pepsodent. It combats the film wherever it may linger. In this way it brings surprising results which one quickly sees. Over 5,000 new people daily are trying out this modern method.

Fights acids too

Pepsodent brings three other effects which authorities now desire.

It multiplies the salivary flow—Nature's great tooth-protecting agent. It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is there to digest starch deposits which may otherwise form acid.

It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is Nature's neutralizer for the acids which cause decay. Pepsin is also included.

Quick changes come

The user of Pepsodent quickly feels conspicuous changes. One cannot doubt the benefits it brings.

Perhaps men who smoke see the most conspicuous effects. Their films are tobacco-stained.

Women see them in prettier teeth, for most film-coats are dingy.

But Pepsodent is most important for the children. Their teeth seem most subject to these film and starch attacks. Dentists advise that children use Pepsodent from the time the first tooth appears.

Present the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth whiten as the film-coats disappear. Watch the other good effects, and read the reasons in the book we send.

This ten-day test will be a revelation. It may bring to your home a new era in teeth cleaning. And the benefits to you and yours may be life-long in extent. Cut out the coupon now. Present it at your store.

Boston Man's Invention Developed Into Compact Orchestra by Chicago Genius

Chicago, June 22. The chronicler is the name that has been given the world's latest musical instrument. It combines all strains of instruments now in use and makes tones that heretofore have never fallen on the ear.

William E. Partington, a wealthy College, is the inventor. He said the instrument would revolutionize concerts.

DUFFYS DISPLAY FIGHTING FORM AT FENWAY

By NICK FLATLEY.

One flying Red Sox took two more healthy swings at the tading Yankees [illegible] at the Fenway garage [illegible] and the result was a large war [illegible]. The Duffys have lost all fear of the batting one, although the fans looked out as per usual [illegible] wallop.

The home record of the Fenway Reds, against possible pennant contenders is really impressive. The Indians came, and we're thinking they threw in a run after they had smashed the initial offering. The Tigers arrived and were harshly blasted out of the first division in four successive wallopings.

Now the Yanks have been torpedoed twice, and everybody admits they were lucky to get away with the first game. A season that started sadly is brightening up considerably.

[illegible]

Herbie won the initial encounter, 8 to 3, while Bullet Joseph came through 8 to 1. The home crowd fully was a home run manufactured by Hauks the very first hitter in the game. The circuit clout should have been a single, but Leibold tried to make a circus catch.

[illegible]

The Sox aren't so far back from the pace. A sustained spurt will hurl them right into the midst of the leaders, who are slipping with disconcerting frequency. Another dual triumph this afternoon would place the Huffys where they could reach out and tag the Yanks, almost.

[illegible]

When Ruth isn't hitting, the New York outfit isn't likely to please any crowd. The Bambino is the only picturesque individual present. He bounced our Sye times, while Pennock was fanning and only made a single last time up, off Hush.

24 home runs to date 1921.
19 home runs same date 1920.

[illegible]

Not only did Lowe and Dreisbanty get four homers, but they swiped it off with one single each. Down in Shreveport this spring I got three homers and three singles in six times up, which is fair enough except that the game was not a major league contest. But those minor league pitchers were not afraid to pitch to me, which is something that can't be said of all their big league brethren.

I am certain that I can break any record that ever was hung up if I get a fair crack at it. It is not humptious egotism, but merely confidence inspired by many record smashing achievements. Just glance back at a few of the marks I have made. To begin with, there were two consecutive years of home run records.

[illegible]

Now, perhaps the fans are wondering why I am hitting to center field instead of right and right center. Some one suggested that perhaps my swing was not as true as it was last season. But I get it. I am hitting them just as hard or harder than ever, but the pitchers are always working out little theories of their own.

They are pitching farther and farther outside to me. Every ball player and every fan knows that a ball pitched outside is harder to pull around to right field if one is speaking of the left-handed hitter, than the ball that is on the inside, or through the middle. As I met that ball on Monday, my bat was at right angles, or practically at right angles to my body. I met the ball with all my power, and it sailed away on a straight line to the stands.

At a meeting of the Boston Athletic Association last night it was decided to hold the annual track and field championships of the association on the Harvard Stadium track on Saturday afternoon, July 30. The meeting was presided over by President Thomas F. Lee, and the matter was discussed at length by the members present. The decision to hold the championships on the Harvard track was reached after a letter had been received from Coach Dean Cromwell of the Stanford University track team, stating that the Stanford team would be unable to compete in the championships if they were held on any other date than July 30. Cromwell's letter stated that the Stanford team would be in the East at that time, and would be unable to remain over for the championships if they were held on any other date.

As a result of the new policy put into effect by Messrs. Conley and Carter, Nate Siegal was willing to go on with Young Kirby at Saxon on the holiday in place of Eddie Shevlin. Furthermore Nate was prepared to fight on a winner-take-all basis. We do not believe this kind of match would have appealed a great deal to Kirby. It is likely that the New England champion will be pitted against the victor of the Shevlin-Kirby affair.

An Attempt at an Understanding Between Mrs. Sprowl and Sir Charles Mallison

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Dick Quarren, society man and sportsman, but clever and good looking, has fallen desperately in love with Cynthia Neale, a girl of good family and one unfortunate matrimonial experience, and since her advent into New York high society has admirers by the score. Quarren meets her first at a masked ball given by Molly Wycherly, wins an hour out of her life on a wager and refrains from kissing her, as he tells her he is eager to do, to win her interest, and obtains permission to call at her home, he tells him there can be nothing serious between them, but she asks him to always think well of her. She tells him goodby for two weeks, when a group is called at Mrs. Sprowl's reception by Quarren's line of action. She visits him at her own home and he realizes that in the temptation of the moment he nearly had yielded to the impulse.

By Robert W. Chambers,
Whose Novels Have Won Him International Fame.

"AND these phases of 'The Real Thing' are fretting an mortifying Karl to the verge of distraction. He awakes to find himself not famous but notorious—not criticised for his workmanship, good or bad, but gabbled about because some ludicrous old Uncle Peenie pretends to discover a similarity between Karl's episodes and characters and certain doings of which Uncle P. is personally cognizant.

Resource of Stupidity

"The great resource of stupidity is and always has been the sarcasm; and as stupidity is almost invariably suspicious, the hunt for hidden meanings preoccupies the majority of mankind.

"Because I have ventured to send you Karl's new book is no reason why I should have presumed to [illegible] several volumes.

"I miss you, oddly enough—more than I never had of you before. Can you not interest us [illegible] sessions of [illegible] which have [illegible] between us like mail? And then I could tell [illegible] that I even remember so much as that rather keen?

"Mrs. Wycherly wrote to Mrs. Lane that you were having a gay time in Russia, that Sir Charles Mallison had joined your party; that you had had luncheons and dinners given you at the club, at the Hotel at the Wiren place, Coquina Castle, and that Jim and Sir Charles had bravely slain many drinks. Which is certainly glory enough to go round. In a friendly little note to me you were good enough to ask what I am doing, and to emphasize your request for an answer by underlining your request.

"Proud and flattered by your generous interest, I hasten to inform you that I am leading the same inane, fatuous, profitless, purposeless, ambitious and ennobling life which I was leading when I first met you. Such a life's existence makes for one's refinement, and, happy in that ignorant peace, undisturbed by [illegible] agitations concerning [illegible] and vicariously, I contemplate my entire intellectual efforts upon keeping my job, which is to remain deaf, dumb and blind, and at the same time be ornamental, reasonably good-tempered and [illegible] to those who are not favorably all of these things at the same time.

"Is it too much to expect another note from you?

"Sincerely yours,

"RICHARD B. QUARREN."

She answered him on the fourth week of her absence.

Her Answer.

"My Dear Mr. Quarren:

"Your letter interested me, but there was all through it an undertone of cynicism which rang false—almost a dissonance to an ear which has heard you strike a truer chord.

"I do not like what you say of yourself, or of your life. I have talked very seriously with Molly, who adores you; and she evidently thinks you capable of achieving anything you care to undertake. Which is my own opinion—based on twenty-four hours of acquaintance.

"I have read Mr. Westgard's novel. Everybody here is reading it. I'd like to talk to you about it, some day. Mr. Westgard's [illegible] bitterness confuses me, a little. [illegible] correct to paint [illegible] judgment I may possess. A [illegible] made in fiction has always seemed [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] very few banks to companion me—I pored over Carlyle's 'French Revolution' and hated Philip Fgalite. But that youthful hatred was a little modified because Fgalite did actually become a personality active. If he had only talked, my hatred would have become contempt for the renegade who did not possess the courage of his convictions. But he voted death to his own caste, facing the tribunal. He talked, but he acted.

Has Courage

"I do not mean as a parallel between Mr. Westgard and the sanguinary French [illegible] Mr. Westgard, also, has the courage of his convictions; he lives. I understand, the life which he considers a proper one. It is the life which he presents in 'The Real Thing'—a somewhat [illegible] respecting, and [illegible] existence, devoted to [illegible] of up- [illegible] and the full meed of [illegible] and religious [illegible] [illegible] Such [illegible] to a [illegible] one. I [illegible] might seem to admire [illegible] Mr. Westgard [illegible] himself [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

FINANCE AND BUSINESS

By B. C. Forbes

Wall Street is the driest spot in America.

Everything is going to pieces—in Wall Street's opinion.

And there is to be no sunshine for a long, long time.

Things are, indeed, in a very bad way stock-market-wise.

Stock prices average less than at any time since the end of 1917.

The current downward movement has been dominated absolutely by the professional bears. They have been able to pounce upon one stock after another and knock down its quotation. The absence of what Wall Street calls "rallying power" has encouraged the destructionists to become brazenly bold.

Many holders of stocks throughout the country have been compelled to let them go because of inability or unwillingness to furnish additional sums to make good impaired margins. Also, a great many quotations have declined to "stop loss" figures. That is, to the figures at which the holders had notified their brokers to sell, should disaster overtake the market. Selling of this kind has greatly facilitated the depredations of the bears. It unquestionably had much to do with Monday's violent break.

* * *

Here is a typical Wall Street view of the stock market outlook: "Weakness will continue for some time. Then there will be one grand smash-up. It will be short but terribly sharp. Prices will break to smithereens. Then will come the sustained upward movement, which everybody knows must come sooner or later. When may this happen? Oh, a month or six weeks from now."

* * *

Now, that forecast may prove as accurate as any much more bullish one might prove. He would be foolhardy who would assert that irregularity, uncertainty and nervousness are over. Speculative movements nearly always reach their extremes. Therefore, although securities measured by all financial and economic yardsticks, are already ridiculously cheap, no one can guarantee that they may not be forced considerably lower.

* * *

My own view is that owners of trustworthy stocks should not choose a time like the present to sell out, unless they are to do so through inability to hold on. "The crowd is always wrong," is an old Wall Street axiom. Everybody connected with Wall Street, almost without exception, is now unqualifiedly pessimistic. May it not be that the axiom is quoted well once again to prove its soundness? Is it not, perhaps, significant that houses which specialize in filling small orders for persons of moderate means now report more buying than selling orders.

Some time ago I sounded a warning that those who occupy positions of leadership in this country should seriously consider the advisability of turning their wholehearted attention to striving to bring about less disturbed conditions. It was all very well months ago to talk about "liquidating labor," "bringing about deflation," "restraining speculation," and so forth. But repressive measures can go too far. The patient's condition may call for dieting, but a diet that leads to fatal results through starvation isn't wise.

America, as an economic patient, has had about all the dieting and all the "reducing." It can stand for the time being. It behooves our political, financial and industrial physicians to modify their prescription.

Business today demands succor.

Drastic governmental economies, leading to reduced taxation, are directly needed.

So are more moderate money rates.

Constructive action by responsible leaders in all walks of life is also imperatively demanded.

Were the late J. P. Morgan on deck today he would probably take command of the ship, restore order, and the strongest people in the financial and industrial world, map out a vigorous constructive course and begin by routing the destructionists and cancers who are now doing their worst to wreck securities. Industrial, railroad and other corporation securities would probably receive orders to talk and act with more confidence in the country's future. An ample supply of funds would doubtless be provided for the use of legitimate borrowers. The administration would, perhaps, be induced to exercise advisability in lending its active support to buttressing the situation.

Of course, everything is not in ideal shape at home and still less so abroad. Yet fundamental financial and economic conditions are less disturbing than is the mental condition prevalent. Had we a financial Napoleon to step forward and hold a constructive standard, events, particularly stock-market-wise, could probably be promptly turned into a more inspiring direction.

Remember, prosperity has been evolved out of very much worse conditions than those now ruling in this country.

MEXICAN PETE LED ADVANCE

Up Nearly Seven Points When Highest; Oils and Steels First in Rally

By W. H. ROSS

Financial Editor

Stocks were strong in New York at noon, with prices near the best level of the morning. Trading was active, first hour transactions averaging almost 250,000 shares. The market had a strong tone from the start. Mexican Petroleum was the feature, averaging nearly seven points. Houston Oil was up more than five, and Pan American better, while Coden, Invincible and Pacific Oil showed more than a point gain at their highest. Oils were the leading group.

Crucible was the strongest steel, U. S. Steel gained more than a point. Call money opened at 5 per cent. Foreign exchange rates were lower, the opening quotations being: Demand sterling $3.74¾, off ½; French francs 6795, off .00012; lire, .0495, off .0004; marks .0142, off .0001.

OPENED A LITTLE HIGHER.

Most stocks were a little higher at the opening because of overnight buying orders and after a brief period of hesitancy on the part of bears there was short covering on sufficient scale to make the market strong. Oils and steels showed the most improvement. Rails advanced, but were not as active as yesterday. There was more animation to motors and tires, while sugars, after displaying some uncertainty, got on a little higher level. Sumatra was in demand and the tobacco leader. There were good gains for a number of specialties, including General Asphalt and Famous Players. Beth Steel buck was weak, receding two points early in the first hour, but rallying to some extent. Equipment issues were strong, especially Baldwin. Reading was foremost among advancing rails. By the middle of the morning the list looked well, but prices were below the best.

BEARS WERE NERVOUS.

For the first time this month bears appeared to be a little nervous and there was considerable element on Wall Street who believed the tide had turned. On the other hand, there were many others who believe that the best that can be hoped of the market for a time is a period of narrow swings. To such observers in consequence, it is claimed, can be expected what so many corporations are now weak financially as at present. The recent liquidation has been, according to report, of a speculative character and there is a question as to whether it is completed. Bears are in that line now and they mean to. One is that banking interests are now disposed to render support to stocks. It is said, on the other hand, that they are much more interested in loan collection than in security quotations. As to the extent of covering on advance yesterday, it was reported here that some stock exchange borrowing demand had greatly decreased and many stocks had been returned.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, June 22.—The cotton market opened to 50 points higher today. A better feeling was noted early and the demand was good, especially for July and October. Commission houses, Southern spot houses and local interests, Southern wire houses and trade interests were all buyers. Liverpool cables were also better than due, and there was a report that its recent severe decline, Bumper crop reports from the South were also a factor, firm at a little above the opening levels. Quotations: July 21.50, October 20.60, December 20.59, January 20.42, March 20.50.

STOCK REACTION CHEERS PUBLIC

"Hard Heads" Believe Price Fluctuations Due to Technical Conditions

By C. B. EVENS.

Copyright, 1921.

Chicago, June 22.—The moderate reaction of the stock market has caused a little cheer and expectancy, but it is believed to be caused by technical conditions chiefly, and the old "hard heads" are refusing to consideration of underlying conditions.

It is likely enough that the situation in the security market has really developed a good deal. Certain it is that some of those corporate matters which have caused the greatest anxiety have been settled and individuals whose financial status was a menace to the whole country have been disposed of in one way and another.

One good authority says: "We have probably heard the last of those disturbing reports from New York," and one or two "withdrawals" from business have no doubt saved the situation.

Many holders of Texas Company stock have been relieved by a moderate amount of money paid to the syndicate actually receive an option on the whole property for five years, the price to be $5,000,000, subject to some small settlements with the Royal Dutch and Pure Oil companies.

The land thus acquired is 6,000,000 acres in area and appears to assure the company of an extraordinary future. Meanwhile the Carib syndicate will come out of the deal in fine shape as it is said not over $100,000 has been invested by that organization in the five years of its life.

Another matter which interests is likely to help stock market cripples, directly, is the $50,000,000 pool to aid livestock interests.

Bankers and stock men in this city have been on the details, but the essential difference between this experiment and the one preceding it is that the new pool has much broader powers and purposes.

The former syndicate would consider only loans on cattle, and only livestock loan companies or banks, exclusively to assist those institutions, and loans were made on the mortgage on breeding or producing herds with the endorsement of the bank or livestock loan company.

LOAN PLAN CHARGED.

This time the loans are to be placed at the direction of the syndicate itself, that is Colt & Co., and are to be made on their own independent judgment of what is good and what is bad.

The loans already existing are based on the inflated values of many months ago, whereas the industry now appears to be down to hard pan. The former syndicate had applications up to $10,000,000, but could loan barely $1,000,000.

The operations of this syndicate and the moderate downward tendency of money rates gives western investors encouragement now becoming rather pronounced.

The recent rise in wheat has helped, however. Farmers are supposed to have been pledged not to pay over $3 a day for labor in the harvest fields now $5 in view of good crops and haste to get the grain before the market.

Representatives of Eastern textile manufacturers are talking rather cheerfully about the situation in their goods, though they admit the buyer is resisting much that has been put before making little or no profits. Ducks and sheetings are especially mentioned as going off well.

Woolen dress goods do not move as actively, but their season is not yet here. The representation of a large Eastern producer reports that the mills have been generally operated in full to the close of the year, and it is high grade goods they turn out. Large stocks are not reported in storage ready for expected activity in the trade. This concern depends particularly on the West and has the region of greatest buying power.

Moving More Freight

A sign of business improvement is found in the increased movement of freight. Within a month the car surplus has been reduced more than 82,000 cars. On June 8 the total of cars in excess of current freight requirements was 389,526, against 471,-922 on May 8. There had been a reduction of 4,614 since June 1.

The report states: "This problem of restoration of foreign trade relations is one of the most important developments from the World War, and upon her success in solving it the United States of the future will depend."

Local Market Opens Irregular and Becomes Strong; Curb Weak and Active

After an irregular opening the Boston market became strong. It was quiet and narrow. Rails and packing issues had a better tone during the morning. Coppers were unchanged as a rule and not many were dealt in. Trading was without feature and local stocks inspired very little interest on the part of commission-house bulletins. Boston & Maine declined a point, Atlas Tack 1¾ and American Woolen 1¼. On one sale Mexican Investment advanced 4¾. Other gains of a point or more were made by Boston & Maine, United Fruit and Mexican Investment.

Among issues to suffer fractional declines were National Lumber, Arbuckle, Old Colony, New York, Cornelia, Small gains were made by American Telephone, American Woolen preferred, Hancock, New Haven, Quincy, Ventura, Carson Hill, Punta Alegre, Libby, Swift & Co.

CURB ISSUES DECLINE.

The Curb had a weak start and was rather active early in the session. Among leaders were Boston & Montana, which sold at Tuesday's lowest figure, Crystal and Verde Mines. Stocks to advance at the start were Boston & New York Air Brake and United Verde Extension. Among those to recede on first transactions were Arizona Commercial, New York Air Brake, Jerome Verde, Verde Mines and Southwestern Oil and Gas.

At the end of an hour Boston & Montana was off 6 cents at 45 cents, Verde Mines 4 cents at 30 cents and Denbigh 1 cent at 7 cents. Verde Mines was up 2 cents at 18 cents and Crystal 1 cent at 9 cents.

BOSTON FINANCIAL NOTES.

IT'S THE TRUTH—

You cannot do as economically or well with any other fuel as much as you can do with gas. That is why long experience with all fuels always leads to the installing of AN ALL GAS KITCHEN, which, of course, includes an efficient Gas Hot Water Heater.

NOW IS A GOOD TIME TO BUY GAS APPLIANCES.

England and Disarmament

Willing to Talk About It, but Not Willing to Disarm

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Great Britain. Premier Lloyd George told the imperial conference at its first session, is willing to talk about disarmament but "MUST maintain its sea power."

That same word "must" is doubtless also uppermost in the minds of the rulers of Britain's insular ally, Japan, which aspires to be in the Pacific what Britain has so long been in the Seven Seas.

Willing to talk about disarmament? Of course. It makes an interesting topic of conversation and ingenious statesmen can envelope it with fascinating language.

But talking about it is always conditioned upon the retention of existing power. No head of an empire who wishes to remain its head can permit his exercise of speech to put in jeopardy the props to imperial power. Those who imagine otherwise cherish illusory hopes.

In a world of self-governing democracies with equal access to raw materials and equal chances to prosper, disarmament is conceivable, for then the need of guns would be very limited.

But who, looking back upon the history of the past bloody seven years, with its uncovering of accentuated hates and greeds, and its cynical flauntings of the rights of weak peoples, can be so impractical as to think that such a world is near at hand?

There can be no safe disarmament until justice is available to all without the use of force.

The burglar who would rob your home is for disarmament of you, but he himself goes armed.

The bully nation that seizes a land as Britain has seized Ireland is for the disarming of those who resist its sway, but it lays down no arms itself until beaten or exhausted.

We can think of no reason why the United States should have any particular interest in engaging in a futile conversation with Great Britain over a subject so clearly limited in advance.

But if the statesmen desire to exercise their tongues, let us at least have the horse sense not to dismantle our navy while a possible enemy retains a superior one.

While People Applaud Brutes They Will Imitate Brutes

Copyright, 1921, Star Company

Two prizefighters are preparing to pound each other into the likeness of a dish of mashed beets, and millions of men and women await the event with anxious interest.

The world would lose nothing if each of the two knocked the head off the other's shoulders, literally instead of figuratively. There is nothing in the whole affair that appeals to any instincts of refinement, to any good impulses of the mind or heart, or that is of the slightest use to society. Yet the press gives the show two or three million dollars' worth of free advertising, and all other topics are subordinated to the absorbing question whether Dempsey can knock out Carpentier or Carpentier can put Dempsey on his back while the referee counts ten.

The wise man does not rail at facts. He considers them, and tries to find out what they mean. And, having considered the case of Dempsey vs. Carpentier, a wise man is bound to conclude that men and women like fighting for the pure pleasure of seeing pain inflicted and blood made to flow, and that while so much of the brute remains in the human being, the men who crave rule and power over the masses will periodically give them the pleasure of witnessing and participating in prizefighting on the grand scale —in the orgy of pain, bloodshed and destruction which is called war.

As long as people really like to see fighting and are willing to pay for the sight, there will always be some showman anxious to provide the spectacle—and it makes no substantial difference whether the managers are kaisers, kings, presidents, generals and admirals, or strike leaders, Red chieftains, or just prizefight promoters and gamblers.

They all play with a confident hand on one of the supreme passions which have survived the processes of development that brought mankind from the low estate of the mindless brute—the inherent, powerful, base and hateful love of inflicting pain and shedding blood.

Alaska Should Be Developed by the Government

We are glad to learn that Secretary of Agriculture Wallace has put his foot down upon the latest scheme to throw our splendid reservoir of natural resources in the great peninsula of Alaska into the maw of the ruthless exploiter. In a letter to Representative Currier of California, chairman of the House Committee on Territories, Secretary Wallace says:

The enactment of this measure would be highly prejudicial to national interests and to Alaskan interests as well. It would remove wholesome checks against the exploitation of our vast national resources, and would deprive Alaska of the technical help of the Federal agencies which combine long experience and the best scientific knowledge in studying and developing specific national resources.

It would be a magnificent experiment if the government on a national scale should undertake the development of Alaska as the Germans developed their railroads and their canals, turning the profit into the national treasury in order to reduce taxes.

Clubbing by Policemen

We call the attention of Commissioner Curtis to the frequency of late with which his police officers have used their clubs.

It may be that this epidemic of clubbings is justified. If so, no one can complain, but if an investigation should prove that they were unjustified, their punishment ought to be very severe. It was only a few weeks ago that we called the public attention to the fact that rowdies were abusing our policemen on the streets, and suggested that something should be done to stop it.

Now we suggest that some of our policemen may be unfit for their positions, unfit to have discretion in the use of a club. Those men should be removed immediately, for they are dangerous, not only to those whom they may club, but as an example of brutality and lawlessness among those whose duty it is to suppress brutality and lawlessness.

Medicos Mourn Lack of Bodies

BERLIN, June 22.—Embryo medicos in Vienna are complaining bitterly because they have no corpses to practice upon with their scalpel.

The scarcity of human bodies for study purposes in the medical college of the University of Vienna has become so great that the college faculty has announced that it will have to close up the anatomical department, and decline to register any more students for the study of medicine and surgery for the next twelve months.

It must not be assumed that the Viennese have attained everlasting life, or that the famous Professor Steinbach has prolonged the existence of the Viennese to such an extent that there is a sudden gap in the death statistics of that city.

The trouble is, according to a dispatch from Vienna, that the Viennese have comprehensible antipathy to being cut up in the medical college for the delectation of students, and that there are societies which claim the bodies and provide for the burial of those who die in hospitals, and whose bodies, in other countries, might be turned over to the medical colleges.

The medical department of the University of Vienna is demanding that the government see to it that the college is provided with a sufficient number of human bodies to enable them to keep up the medical courses.

On Leaving Japan

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

(From the June Cosmopolitan. Published by permission of the International Magazine Company)

A CHANGING medley of insistent sounds
Like broken airs played on a samisen
Pursues me, as the waves blot out the shore.
The trot of wooden heels; the warning cry
Of patient runners; laughter and strange words
Of children, children, children everywhere.
The clap of reverent hands before some shrine;
And over all the haunting temple bells
Waking, in silent chambers of the soul,
Dim memories of long-forgotten lives.
But, oh! the sorrow of the undertone,
The wail of hopeless weeping in the dawn
From lips that smiled through gilded bars at night.

Brave little people of large aims, you bow
Too often, and too low, before the Past;
You sit too long in worship of the dead.
Yet have you risen, open eyed, to greet
The great material Present; now salute
The greater Future, blazing its bold trail
Through old traditions. Leave your dead to sleep
In quiet peace with God. Let your concern
Be with the living and the yet unborn;
Bestow on them your thoughts, and waste no time
In costly honors to insensate dust.
Unlock the doors of usefulness, and lead
Your lovely daughters forth to larger fields,
Away from jungles of the ancient sin.
For, oh! the sorrow of that undertone,
The wail of hopeless weeping in the dawn

Letters to the Editor

Warning to Parents

Editor Boston American:

While driving through Lynn Monday afternoon at the rate of about fifteen miles an hour we passed some children playing ball on the sidewalk. Just as we came opposite them a girl of about twelve years jumped right in front of my car to get the ball which had rolled out in the street. If I had not been able to stop my car at a moment's notice, nothing could have saved her. I am writing this letter in hope that the parents of children will see it and realize how hard it is for the drivers of automobiles to always avoid accidents.

Early Irish Settlers

Editor Boston American:

We have heard a great deal about the English settlers in New England in pre-Revolutionary days. We have been fed up on "Hands across the sea" propaganda through the tercentenary landing of the Pilgrims celebrations, and a few facts unknown to the average fair-minded reader may be in order. Philip Bogenai, an English authority and an Oxford man, writing on "The American Irish and Their Influence in Irish Politics," goes as far as to say that a little more than a score of years after the landing of the Pilgrims in 1620 "an Irish emigration took place which in numbers alone put the small Plymouth colony altogether in the shade." It was a belief some years ago, and is believed even today by the uninformed that there were very few Irish in Massachusetts in pre-Revolutionary days. Prejudiced unreliable history has been taught even in our schools that the people of New England were all descendants of the English. Even Henry Cabot Lodge, in his history of the Revolution, held this view, only suggesting and referring to a new race, formerly unknown, the Scotch-Irish, whatever that means.

The truth, like murder, will out. When the General Court of Massachusetts ordered the publication of the muster roll of the soldiers who fought in the Revolutionary War from Massachusetts it was found that the Irish were foremost in numbers. There are 120 Kellys, eighty Burks, though only thirty Sheas. There is not an Irish name that is not on this honor roll.

PSYCHOLOGY OF CRUELTY TO LOWER ANIMALS

By Garrett P. Serviss

I HAVE a letter from an "Old Reader" which is in itself an essay. Some of its questions are like glass boxes with the answers inclosed. They also resemble peepholes into the dark corners of human nature.

"How, when and where," asks "Old Reader," "did the way of thinking develop which makes it possible for us to stick a worm or crab on an angling hook, or, unconcerned, look at a dozen live lobsters on ice in a restaurant window; whereas we run for the police when a man beats a horse or a dog?

Discrimination.

"Has the law always discriminated between different animals? If not, when did it begin? Do we protect some animals because we like them, or because they are useful to us?"

We are indifferent to such sufferings primarily because we ourselves are animals. A famished man will kill and devour after the manner of a tiger. The physical law of his life is the same as that of the tiger's life. Pity, mercy, tender consideration for others, are by-products, if they arise from the operation of purely material laws, and if they do not so arise then they are special qualities belonging to the human soul not to be accounted for by science.

Between these qualities and the instincts of the brute within us there is perpetual warfare.

The terrible scenes in the Roman amphitheatres, which afforded the highest pleasure and delight to tens of thousands of spectators, are examples whose stain never can be wiped from the human record. It is unnecessary to quote other instances.

Great Significance.

There may be great significance in the fact that indifference to the sufferings and the wrongs of animals tends to diminish and even to disappear entirely with the advance of a man's years. Is it because the soul gains over the body? As a boy I seldom felt any compunction when impaling a worm on a fishhook, but I should have great difficulty in forcing myself to do it now.

No doubt an interesting book might be written on the growth of man's consideration for the lower animals. It probably would require much research. A point of special interest would be as to the influence of Christianity in this direction.

AMERICA AS SEEN BY AN ENGLISH AUTHOR

By Jane Curtis

(Visiting in Brookline)

CERTAIN definite conclusions have impressed themselves upon me as an Englishwoman after six months of life in America.

One of these is the remarkable number of human interests the American and English people have in common; and it would seem to me that apart from religious and political misunderstandings, these many common human interests, if recognized and emphasized, might contribute very materially to the firm establishment of abiding unity. If there is kinship at heart between nations, it needs but the practical expression of that kinship to make for true friendliness and fellowship.

There Are Differences

It is true that there are differences in American and English life. America has her own personality; so has England, but it is also true that fellowship and agreement are not dependent upon uniformity of personality. Both fulfil a destiny among the nations according to their situation, endowment and opportunity. Where there is frank recognition of differences, with mutual respect, strife and bitterness are made impossible.

Mutual knowledge is an essential factor in the unity of nations.

I wonder if the average American knows how interested the average Englishman is in all that appertains to life in America. It goes without saying that much has been woven into American civilization that does not belong to the old world, and it is that which truly interests and captivates the English mind. We like to hear of the newer methods in industry, politics and education. Stories of the vast wealth and social splendor of America never fail to excite genuine and almost childish interest in the minds of English men and women. Englishwomen listen to accounts of the doings of Americans with real interest and eagerness. The exclusive self-sufficiency of certain classes of English people went down forever in the war, although it is a question if ever it existed to the extent that is supposed.

Example to World

Today the practical genius of the American people which characterizes every department of their public and domestic life is frankly regarded as an example to the world. It is not for America to resent the curiosity and interest of other nations in her doings, but to regard it as constituting an appeal to her for inspiration, and as an opportunity for splendid leadership.

America and England ought always to remember the things that make them one, in spite of the religious differences (that is which there are none more bitter). They are one in the sense that they have the same aspirations toward peace and good will.

The same fundamental principles underlie both civilizations; right dealing, justice and truth. Both peoples have a boundless stock of humor and enthusiasm, while the women of both nations are working for the same ideals.

THE YOUNG FOLKS

When parents have daughters old enough to entertain young persons of the same age they must expect to do so and plan accordingly.

A girl cannot expect to enjoy the hospitality of other homes when her own home is closed to outsiders.

It costs something, it is true, to help the young folk with their parties and other social functions, but parents should expect to assume the responsibilities for the social pleasures of children.

Usually when the young men begin to call on the girls there are additions and redecorations asked for in the home furnishings, and unless the parents are well enough to do to keep the home modernized, this must be expected and planned for ahead.

Of course it is difficult sometimes for parents to see the shabbiness of certain articles which association holds dear.

But the younger generation can hardly look from the same point of view, so do not expect it.

If you are fortunate enough to possess some really old and valuable articles, teach the children to value them for what they are worth in preference to tawdry stuff, but fix up for the youngsters, then "the it and you were young
